Germans Repulse French in
New Attack in Cham-

Today's War News Given in Summary

A complete understanding on all questions relating to the conduct of the war has been reached between France and Great Britain, a Paris dispatch announces. Premier Briand and War Secretary Gallieni, of France, and Foreign Secretary Gray and War Secretary Kitchener, of Great Britain, reached the agreement.

Another American steamer, the San Juan, of the New York and Porto Rico line, has been held up and searched by the French cruiser De Cartes, and two passengers, described as Germans, taken off.

All arrangements for demobilizing the Greek army have been made and it is expected a demobilization decree will be issued shortly, an Athens dispatch announces.

The current statement of the Bulgarian war office traces the Franco-British retirement as far south as the Babovo-Valandovo line. Valandovo is about 20 miles from the Greek border.

The Teutonic powers have more than a million men at their disposal in the Balkans, Premier Radoslavoff, of Bulgaria, declares, according to a London news agency dispatch.

Enrollment for military service under the Earl of Derby's recruiting plan for Great Britain ends at midnight tonight. London dispatches tell of great crowds at the recruiting stations awaiting opportunity for enrollment during the closing hours.

Only artillery engagements are reported on the western war front, with the exception of minor trench fighting in the Champagne region.

Paris, Dec. 11. (5:20 p. m.) France and Great Britain decided today to continue the campaign in the Balkans and agreed on military measures designed to assure the security of the expeditionary forces which landed at Saloniki.

A semi-official announcement issued this afternoon indicates that the French and British troops are being withdrawn from Serbia.

Questions of an urgent character relating to the conduct of the war were settled on the basis of a complete understanding today at a conference of representatives of France and Great Britain. Premier Briand and War Secretary Gallieni acted for France and Foreign Secretary Grey and War Secretary Kitchener for Great Britain.

A statement to the effect that the question at issue between Greece and the entente powers are on the way toward settlement, was issued to M. Goumaris, Greek minister of the interior by the Haves correspondent at Athens. After a meeting of the cabinet council last night M. Goumaris, the correspondent says, made this statement and added that he regarded the diplomatic situation as satisfactory.

advances received here today indicate that the Russians are hurriedly concentrating troops along the Rumanian border. The Austrian forces in Bukovina also are being reinforced heavily.

U.S. WILL ASK SAFE CONDUCT

Acts on Boy-Ed and Von Papen at the Request of Berlin.

Accedes to U. S. Plea for Withdrawal of Two Attaches.

Washington, Dec. 11.—Secretary Lansing will immediately ask Great Britain and France, through their embassies here, for safe conduct for Captains Boy-Ed and von Papen, respectively naval and military attaches of the German embassy here, pursuant to the request of Emperor William, who personally recalled the officers.

Withdrawal of the attaches had been requested by the United States because of their activities which rendered them persona non grata to the American government. Emperor William's act was made known by Secretary Lansing after receiving communication from the foreign office through Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador. The emperor also requested safe conduct for the successors of Captains Boy-Ed and von Papen, who will be named later.

Action on this, however, will await the naming of the successors. There was some speculation here today as to whether Great Britain and France would in event the two German attaches leave this country demand that they go under parole, pledging themselves not to participate in the European war. In some quarters it was thought that such a demand might be made. Officials of the German embassy, however, are said to believe it proper to ask for safe conduct for the attaches.

Officials were plainly gratified today over the outcome of a situation which had apparently been fraught with serious difficulties. As a result Secretary Lansing now is free to again take up negotiations with Germany for settlement of the Lusitania controversy and the cases of other foreign diplomatic and consular officers. It is expected that the case of Alexander von Nuber, Austrian consul general at New York, will be the first to be acted upon.

FARMERS ORGANIZE BIG ASSOCIATION

At a meeting of farmers from all sections of Allen county, Saturday afternoon in the assembly room of the court house a permanent organization was formed to be known as the Allen County Agricultural society. Officers were elected and plans were discussed relative to the purpose of the new association.

E. A. Coleman, of Purdue university, in charge of the county agents in Indiana was the principal speaker at the meeting. He explained that the new society should act as sort of a central body for the various farmers' clubs and agricultural organizations in the townships of the county and assist in every way possible the work of the county agent.

Similar organizations were formed this week in Wells and Adams counties.

BEVY OF CAPTIVATING BEAUTIES TAGGING FOR HOPE HOSPITAL.

More men simply couldn't resist Saturday, and thereby hangs the tale of probably the most successful Hope hospital tag day of them all. In spite of the weather (which was considerable) hundreds of girls lay in wait for passersby on all downtown corners and applied the pastebards. The girls at the left are Miss Janet Bauer, Miss Hulda Irmischer and Mrs. Helen Puckett Eby. Left to right in the lower picture, Miss Constance Bogart, Miss Margaret Evans, Miss Marjory Dailey, Miss Lillian Smith and Miss Mildred Weaver. In the upper picture Miss Evans, aided and abetted by Mrs. Ben H. Hudson, is seen waylaying and taking his hard-earned coin from a susceptible young man.

Trial in These.

Indianapolis, Dec. 11.—Charges against 105 of the remaining 118 defendants in the Marion county election conspiracy cases were dismissed by Special Judge W. H. Eichhorn on the action of Prosecutor A. J. Rucker here today.

The prosecutor said that in view of the showing made in the trial of Mayor Joseph E. Bell, on the conspiracy charges, he did not believe the state had sufficient evidence to warrant going to trial with the 105 cases.

Remain to Be Tried.
The thirteen defendants who remain to be tried after the ruling today are: Herman Adam, inspector of weights and measures; Samuel V. Perrott, chief of police; Waylan Sander and Morton C. Hulise, police sergeants; Roy A. Pope, police detective; William F. Kissel, city mule contractor; James A. Lucas, police court bailiff; Irving Hardy and Lee

WOULD HAVE TO LICK STAMP AND CURSE THE DEMOCRATS

Washington, Dec. 11.—"Every time a man wrote a bank check he would have to lick a stamp and curse the democratic party," declared Senator Tillman, democrat, today, announcing he proposed to fight President Wilson's suggestion that a stamp on bank checks be included in the war revenue law. "I prefer an increased graduated income tax and whenever a man has an income of $1,000,000 I would take all in excess of that," Senator Tillman added. "A million a year is enough for any man, and the government needs the money."

Annual Tag Day Will Net $1,500 for Hope Hospital

Undaunted by the wintry winds and a snow storm, two hundred fair maidens of Fort Wayne were Saturday selling tags for the benefit of the Hope hospital and judging from the most generous response on the part of the public it is believed that in excess of $1,500 will be realized.

On every street corner and throughout the entire business district of the city the girls with their trays of tags held up every person they saw and to try to escape them was out of the question. As a matter of fact but few persons made the attempt, and still a fewer number refused to at least donate something when approached. Now and then the girls would be unconsciously turned down, but not often. The contributions would run all the way from a nickel to a dollar and in a few instances more.

According to reports reaching the tag day headquarters in the Arcade building, on West Berry street, the interest manifested far surpasses previous years and it is believed that a new record will be set in the number of persons tagged.

At the noon hour the girls were given free lunch at the headquarters, all of which was donated by members of the committee. Saturday evening the nurses from Hope hospital will do the tagging. They will be properly chaperoned and will remain on the streets until after the theaters close.

Tag day is held annually by the Women's Hope Hospital committee, being started three years ago. Fifteen hundred dollars were realized the first year and $1,300 last year. Mrs. Justin X. Study is chairman of the committee this year.

SLEET AND SNOW HAMPERS TRAFFIC

Terrific Storm Raging on Western Division of Traction Line.

Traffic on the western end of the Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana Traction company was greatly hampered, Saturday, as a result of a terrific sleet and snow storm, which, according to reports received at the general offices of the company, is moving this way. The storm was the severest at Lafayette and made the operation of interurban cars most difficult. Many of the cars arriving from the west are covered with sleet and snow.

Sharp Receives Appointment.
Announcement was made Saturday of the appointment of Ross Sharp to the position of chief engineer of the Lafayette power house of the traction company, succeeding W. J. Young, who has resigned. Young expects to make his future home with his father at Huntertown.

Sharp was former assistant engineer and in his appointment to the position of chief engineer the company has followed its usual custom of promoting a man next in line.

The pay car made its regular trip Saturday morning, carrying the employees on all the lines.

NEGLIGENCE CAUSED DAY-LITE EXPLOSION

Coroner Kruse Believes
Over Pressure Responsible for Accident.

Over pressure in the generator was responsible for the explosion at the plant of the Day-Lite Gas company, Friday morning, that killed Herman Bohne and Archibald Spear and endangered property and lives within a radius of a quarter of a mile, according to investigations that have been conducted by Coroner Edward H. Kruse and his deputy, R. B. Garmire. The coroner stated Saturday that he intended to make his investigation most thorough in an effort to ascertain whether there had been any criminal negligence and for that reason it will be several days before a verdict is rendered.

Investigation by the coroner has revealed that even though Bohne or Spear had been smoking or even though they had lighted a match no explosion could have taken place providing the top of the tank in which the gas was generated was securely fastened. Consequently, there is but one other solution and that is that the pressure was permitted to exceed the maximum, which was 275 pounds.

Did Not Watch Gauge.

In the manufacture of the gas carbide and water are first placed in a tank four feet high and fourteen inches in diameter on the inside. After this has been done the top is fastened securely and the generator started. It was the duty of Bohne and Spear to then leave this building and fill the small tanks in which the gas is placed for the consumers. This was done in a building about forty feet west of the generator and also contained a gauge showing the exact pressure of the tank. When the pressure reached 275 pounds it was Bohne's or Spear's duty to turn it off and this is the very thing it is believed by the coroner they failed to do.

Everything indicates that the two men were out in the yard or in the building that was blown up when the explosion took place, and if this is true they were not watching the gauge and permitted the pressure to exceed the maximum.

Those familiar with the manufacture of gas of this character declare that the company should have provided for an automatic arrangement whereby it would not have been necessary for anybody to have watched the gauge. In other words, they contend that when the pressure had reached the maximum some provision should have been made for it to have been automatically reduced. Manager E. J. Wohlfield, of the plant, declares that he does not know how this could have been done. Similar plants have been installed elsewhere, he declares, and no trouble has ever occurred before. According to Russell Humble, of the Fort Wayne Gas Welding

TRIES TO PREVENT RAISING OF FLAG

Culprit Cuts Rope at No. 8
School in Adams Township.

Much mystery surrounds the cutting of the rope with which a new flag was to have been raised at No. 8 school house, in Adams township, Friday, which was discovered, however, just a few hours before the time set for the celebration that was held in connection with the occasion.

That the act was done maliciously and in an effort to prevent the unfurling of the American flag to the breeze is generally believed in Adams township, and the apprehension of the culprit will result in vigorous prosecution. Patriotic citizens of the township are not so much concerned over the cutting of the rope as they are over the motive prompting it, and if in their midst lives a man who, by his depredation intended to insult the flag, they want to know who he is.

The cut rope was discovered by Charles E. Irwin, teacher at No. 8 school, Friday morning, and he lost no time in making the necessary repairs, which required the lowering of the pole and putting it back in place again. The fact that the pole and rope had been in place for about two weeks and no effort was made to damage it until the night before the date of the flag raising, leads to the belief that an attempt was made to prevent the flag from being raised.

Nevertheless the ceremonies were held and were witnessed by a large crowd. D. O. McComb, superintendent of the schools of the county; Clarence Henry, county agricultural agent, and E. H. Lane were the principal speakers. Two old veterans of the civil war raised the flag and as it was unfurled to the breeze all heads were turned and

HARRY S. NEW WANTS PLACE

Enters Campaign for Republican Nomination for Senatorship.

THINKS HE CAN BE NOMINATED

Feels Free to Enter Race
Since Retirement of Hugh Miller.

Indianapolis, Dec. 11.—Capt. Harry S. New, republican national committeeman for Indiana for a number of years, today announced that he would be a candidate for the republican nomination for United States senator, subject to the primary to be held March 7, 1916.

Mr. New decided to make the race following the withdrawal of Hugh Th. Miller, who was forced out of the running by ill-health. The statement announcing Mr. New's candidacy follows in part:

"Last spring and summer I was strongly urged to become a candidate by hundreds of friends in every section of the state. At that time the friends of Hugh Th. Miller felt that that gentleman, having borne the burden of the battle in 1914, when success was impossible, was entitled to another nomination this year when victory was assured and to that opinion I subscribed. The lamentable physical breakdown, which has taken Mr. Miller out of the contest, will be deplored by all who know him and by no man more than I, but it makes a vacancy in the field of candidates into which I feel free to step.

"I believe I can be nominated and, if nominated, that I can and will receive the undivided support of my party."

SALESMAN FACES FEDERAL CHARGE

L. Lucian Roberts, a salesman in the employ of the Bowser company, was arrested Saturday on an indictment returned in December, 1914, by the federal grand jury at Denver, charging him with using the mails to defraud and to obtain money under false pretenses. Post-office Inspector Nelson, of Denver, came here with a certified copy of the indictment upon which Commissioner T. J. Logan ordered Roberts' arrest.

Roberts was taken to Indianapolis Saturday afternoon by Deputy Marshal William H. Hagar and on Sunday will be taken before Judge A. B. Anderson, where arrangements will be made for his return to Denver.

The organization was formed by the safety first society in co-operation with principals of all the schools who selected the boys best qualified to patrol the sidewalks and crossings. Signs will be posted at all crossings near school houses reading: "Always be careful. Don't cross in the middle of the block. Don't hitch on cars, automobiles or wagons. Don't roller skate on the roadway."

MAYOR POWERS OF ST. PAUL IS HERE

First Commission Executive of Twin City is an Enthusiast.

Hon. Winn Powers, mayor of St. Paul, Minn., was a welcome caller at the city hall, Saturday, and spent some time with Mayor W. J. Hosey and Messrs. R. E. Kelly, F. E. Singrey and Henry Hilgeman, of the board of works, discussing matters of municipal government. Mayor Powers is en route home from the waterways congress at Washington, D. C., to which he was a delegate from the northwest, and stopped in Fort Wayne a few hours to see some relatives and to take a train for Angola, where he will visit members of the Powers family. He is a son of Winn Powers, one of the early pioneers of Steuben county, and is a cousin of the late Judge Stephen A. Powers and the late Judge Frank M. Powers. He has spent much of his life in the northwest and is prominent in the affairs of that region.

Mayor Powers is the first chief executive of the Minnesota capital to be elected under the commission form of government adopted by the people of St. Paul less than two years ago and he has been in office a year and a half. For ten years prior to his election as mayor he served in the assembly, or upper chamber of the city council, which is a bicameral body. He is an expert in municipal affairs and his reputation extends far beyond the boundaries of his city. Mayor Powers is an intense advocate of the non-partisan plan of municipal government and strong for the commission form of government. He says this plan has worked admirably in St. Paul and highly to the satisfaction of the public. He is a Wilson democrat of pronounced type, but considers partisan politics and methods out of place in city affairs. Mayor Powers is just now much interested in motorized fire equipment and while in the city took occasion to inspect such apparatus of the sort as Fort Wayne is now provided with. During the afternoon Mayor Hosey and the members of the board of works took Mayor Powers on an automobile tour of the city to visit some of the institutions.

Traction Company Loses in Attempt to Restrain Assessments.

In the superior court, Saturday, Judge Carl Yaple rendered his decision in the suit of the Fort Wayne & Northern Indiana Traction company against the board of works of the city of Fort Wayne and the Grace Construction company for an injunction to restrain the collection of $1,769 levied against the plaintiff as an assessment for certain portions of the State boulevard pavement for which the plaintiff is to pay. The complaint was that the primary assessment was $882.54 and that this had been raised to $1,769 in the final assessment. The plaintiff wanted the assessment cut to the primary figures. The court finds that the plaintiff should pay the final assessment. It was agreed by the parties to the suit before the hearing that the decision of the court should be abided by and that there should be no appeal, so that the present of Judge Yaple's decision ends the litigation.

Tynningham Dashes Back Soon After Sailing from New York.

New York, Dec. 11.—The British freighter Tynningham, sugar laden, put back toward New York today soon after she had passed quarantine, fire having broken out aboard. She passed quarantine returning, with smoke pouring from after hold No. 4, and anchored off the Statue of Liberty.

The Tynningham was bound for Liverpool. Twenty minutes after she had passed the Narrows, outward bound, the crew discovered fire. The vessel immediately put about and rushed to anchor under full steam. On Dec. 5, while at the Erie basin in Brooklyn, fire broke out in the hold that was the seat of today's flame. Search at the time disclosed fragments of a broken bottle believed to have contained chemicals, which caused an explosion.

Some Chicken! It is Worth $100,000

"Lady Eglantine" appears to be an ordinary chicken. If you see her crossing the street to get on the other side, you would pay less attention to her than to a fly if it should settle on your nose. That, of course, would be due to the fact that you did not know that "Lady Eglantine" was "some chicken." She is a little White Leghorn hen which has laid just 314 eggs in 365 days, thereby winning the world's championship. Her home is at Eglantine farm, Greensboro, N. C., and she is owned by A. C. Greenleaf. The hen is worth $100,000.

Adam will be the first of these to go to trial and his case was set to begin January 10.

Prosecutor Rucker in dismissing the 105 cases said some of the defendants could better be tried on charges of espionage, violation of election laws, than on conspiracy charges. All of the defendants had been taken to the county jail.

DR. HOOPER TELLS OF ASSOCIATION'S WORK

Says That Organization Has More Than $9,000,000 in Reserve.

That the Woman's Benefit association of the Maccabees, is in a most prosperous condition, was shown by figures given by Dr. Elizabeth Hooper, supreme medical examiner, in her address Friday evening at the district rally of the association at the Wabash railroad shops. Dr. Hooper declared that more than $9,000,000 is held in reserve and during the last eight years the association has totaled a net profit of $40,000. An average of $3,000 is paid each day in death claims.

Dr. Hooper spoke on the subject: "The Hospital and Home Service." Twenty-five years ago the order was not in existence, she said, while now the benefit membership numbers more than 170,000.

Delegates from all parts of the Twelfth district were in attendance and a most pleasant day was enjoyed. Mrs. Grace Meredith, great commander and supreme trustee, was present and took part in the day's program.

ANGOLA MAN KILLS SELF ACCIDENTALLY

Angola, Ind., Dec. 11.—While cleaning a shotgun with which he intended to go hunting, yesterday afternoon, W. Irving, aged 50 years, was killed instantly when the following piece was accidentally discharged. The charge tore a large hole in Irving's chest just above the heart. Mrs. Irving, who was in the upper part of the house, heard the report of the gun and rushing to the room where her husband had been at work, found him dead in a pool of blood. There is no reason to suspect suicide. Irving had been for many years a barber here, but lately had entered the automobile business. Besides his wife he leaves a daughter, who is Mrs. P. R. Wrick, of Fort Wayne.

MANAGER GREENLAND

REDUCING EXPENSES

Retrenchment and reduction of expenses to the very minimum will be the policy of Sam. W. Greenland, who a few days ago was appointed general manager of the Fort Wayne and Springfield traction line, in an effort to put the road on a paying basis.

The office force at Decatur will remain unchanged, except that the stenographer, Miss Celeste Wenhold, has been discontinued as auditor and Homer Ruhl and Miss Flora Fledderjohann as ticket agents.

Much of the repair work will be done in the car barns of the Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana Traction company, in this city, and as a result, but one man of the six maintained in repair work in the barns at Decatur will be retained. The section hand force has been reduced from ten men to one. A. M. Henry will continue as roadmaster.

Only nine of the two hundred old stockholders attended a meeting at Decatur Friday, called by Charles Dirksen, former vice president of the Decatur line. The purpose of the meeting was to make an effort to raise enough money to repurchase the road. Nothing was accomplished. It is said that if $30,000 can be raised the road could be taken over and the main offices, power house and car barns retained in Decatur. Mr. Dirksen had planned to raise this money by an assessment of five per cent. on all the old stockholders.

STRIKE THUGS ARE PAIR OF BLUFFERS

Twain, Who Wanted to Burn, Wreck and Slug, Fined for Loitering.

Perry LeVin and Albert H. Gilmore, the two young men who caused a sensation here a week ago by appearing at the headquarters of the striking street car men with a proposal to engage their expert services to the strikers to commit arson, wreck cars and slug strike-breakers and were turned over to the police after being tricked into detailing their proposals to a pair of officers posing as officers of the carmen's union, were tried in the city court on loitering charges Saturday morning and fined $25 and costs each. That the two fellows are a pair of bluffers was shown by both their own testimony and information from the secret service division of the Chicago police department. Charles L. Laskin, acting chief of the detective department in Chicago, wrote to Chief Charles Lenz here that LeVin resides at 1235 Washburn avenue, Chicago, with his brother-in-law, Joseph Schultz, and has a good reputation in that city, and that Gilmore's true name is Abe Greenberg, his home with his father at 2219 West Twelfth street, and his reputation bad. Greenberg stuck to his alias for a time and then admitted his true name, but would not abate a word of his story that he had been much employed by the Chicago secret service chiefs to do "gun-slug" work. He said also that he had served two years in the regular army and had seen much service in the Philippines. On the stand both men repudiated their earlier stories to the police that they had been brought here by the officials of the traction company to propose a program of violence to the strikers in order to ascertain "how far the carmen's union would be willing to go." The two were arrested by Detective Sergeant Joseph Brennan and bailiff George Eisenhut, who impersonated carmen's union officers at the strike headquarters and to them detailed how they would set fire to the hotel, where strike-breakers are quartered, wreck cars and slug carmen.

Jitney Driver Is Fined.

A. A. Mosier, of Lansing, Ind., who has been driving a jitney bus in Fort Wayne since the street car strike began, was fined $5 and costs by Judge Kerr for unlawfully making a turn to the wrong side of a street at an intersection. The principal witness was Clem Freiburger, 2118 Drexel boulevard, into whose motor-cycle Mosier drove his jitney at the corner of Cass and Fifth streets, Nov. 1. Freiburger had his right foot badly injured and still goes on crutches. He was taken home by Mosier, who at the time offered to settle all damages so that he would not have to report the accident to police headquarters. Mosier was arrested Friday afternoon near the court house when Freiburger saw the man drive his machine up to the curb. Mosier denied his guilt strongly, but later was tricked into an admission of it.

Other City Court Cases.

Cornelius Harper, a drunk, was turned loose and Tom Moser, another one, was sent to jail to wait until Monday.

Charles Dennis, the Zanesville sport who celebrated a basketball victory Wednesday night by getting drunk and going to sleep on a porch in the southern part of the city, was fined $1 and costs and went back to jail.

Margaret Daley, a middle-aged woman of respectable family, was charged with disorderly conduct and put under $500 bond for her appearance Tuesday. She was then taken to the county infirmary, where she will be treated for alcoholism. The woman has been drinking heavily and had made a scene of disorder at her home, where she wrecked a talking machine and some records.

NEWS OF FORT WAYNE'S NEIGHBORS

LONG RESIDENT IN ADAMS.

Decatur, Ind., Dec. 11.—Joseph D. Lower, one of the best known men and farmers in Adams county, passed away Friday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Fred Linn, on Mercer avenue, in Decatur. The deceased was a son of William and Catherine Lower and was born in Ohio. In 1852 the parents moved to Adams county, settling in Union township, where he grew to manhood and much of his life was spent. Mr. Lower was united in marriage with Miss Rebecca J. Congleton in 1867. Following their marriage they settled on a farm in Union township where they resided until 1887, when they sold it and purchased another one in Root township, near Decatur, on which he had since resided. For most of his life he has been a faithful member of the United Brethren church. He is survived by the widow and three children.

HOG CHOLERA CHECKED

Huntington, Ind., Dec. 11.—An epidemic of hog cholera that has alarmed farmers in the southwestern part of the county during the last six weeks and caused a financial loss estimated at several thousands of dollars is now under control, according to men who have been fighting it. About twenty farms near Mt. Etna were under voluntary quarantine while the epidemic was worst. The most disastrous results were within an area of four square miles. Vaccination of well hogs as soon as one animal in a bunch became affected prevented much loss. Those farmers who had their hogs vaccinated before the epidemic reached their farms invariably suffered no loss, it was said. The first case developed six weeks ago on the M. B. Fisher farm.

MADE IT EASY FOR THE COURT

Hartford City, Ind., Dec. 11.—It doesn't pay to tell a man he's a liar, especially in open court. Frank Gallagher, sign painter, will vouch for that. Gallagher was arrested on a charge of perjury filed against him by his employer, Richard Elsey. He denied the charge. Elsey was in court, the case being called before Justice Underhill. Elsey and Gallagher got into words and Gallagher up and called Elsey a liar, adding, it is said, a few trimmings. The first charge brought against Gallagher was that he had sworn and another charging the same thing filed. To this the defendant could make no defense, for the entire court had heard him provoke Elsey by calling him "liar."

EAGLES MAY NOT REORGANIZE

Hartford City, Ind., Dec. 11.—The Eagles' lodge in Hartford City may not be reorganized after all. Although there has been a great deal of talk about reorganizing the lodge prominent members who belonged at the time the charter was taken away by the grand lodge, are now authority for the statement that the efforts to reorganize probably will fall through. The Eagles' lodge was one of the largest in the city at the time the charter was taken away. Dr. G. W. Sweigart, who has charge of the efforts to reorganize the lodge here, stated that there was no truth in the statement that the lodge would not be reorganized.

MAGNOLIA TREE IN BLOOM.

Bluffton, Indiana, December 11.—A magnolia tree in bloom, a decided novelty for Northern Indiana, especially in December, is being exhibited at the city waterworks, where it is growing and blossoming in a big tub inside the dynamo room. The room is always at summer heat and there is plenty of light so that there is no reason that the tree should not be in blossom all winter. The tree was grown from a start sent by a southern friend to Mayor John Mock. The blossoms give off a fragrance that can be noticed all over the big dynamo and pump room.

NEW CHURCH FOR GARRETT

Garrett, Ind., Dec. 11.—The Christian church plans to spend $15,000 on a new church building, which will probably be erected next year. The building committee submitted plans to the congregation last Thursday night and they were accepted. At a meeting Tuesday evening arrangements were made to have the architect to proceed accordingly. The plans call for a building 60x90 feet in dimensions.

FIRST DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE

Huntington, Ind., Dec. 11.—Charles C. Ashley has made the first announcement of candidacy for a nomination on the democratic county ticket next year. Mr. Ashley wants the nomination for sheriff on that ticket, and thinks that by getting in early he is getting the jump on the others who expect to make the race.

HUNTINGTON POULTRY SHOW

Huntington, Ind., Dec. 14.—According to reports from Harry I. Young, secretary of the Huntington County Poultry association, the arrangements for the annual show to be held in the Coliseum in Huntington, January 18 to 22, are proceeding rapidly. It has been decided to give five awards in each class, the first three carrying monetary prizes and the fourth and fifth being honorary.

Bluffton, Ind., Dec. 11.—Daniel C. Vollmer has completed his twenty-fifth year in charge of the Western Union Telegraph company, and his thirtieth year in the employ of the company. Mr. Vollmer is entitled to retire on a pension, but he will continue in charge of the local office as long as his health continues.

LONG LOST MAN IS DEAD

Bluffton, Ind., Dec. 11.—Ezra Hunnicutt, 72, who was located at Middle-ton, Ind., recently by Wells county relatives after an unexplained absence of fifty years, died recently. After a long illness, he passed away at his home in Bluffton.

for burial. Bert Hunnicutt of Poneto is a brother and there are numerous other brothers and sisters in Huntington county. In the event that the funeral is held in Idaho, none of the Wells county relatives will be able to attend.

WED HALF CENTURY AGO.

Lagrange, Ind., Dec. 11.—Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Trexler, an aged and well known pioneer couple of this county, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their farm home east of Lagrange this week. The event was made the occasion of a very joyous family gathering. All of the children and many of the grandchildren of the venerable couple were present and enjoyed a big family dinner at noon. Mr. and Mrs. Trexler were married in this county on December 7, 1865. They went at once to the farm which they now occupy and have resided there continuously all of these fifty years. Mr. Trexler is 75 years of age and was born in Ashland county, Ohio. His wife is a native of Germany but came with her parents to this county when but a child. Her age is 60 years. They have ten children, all of whom reside in this county except one daughter, Mrs. Homer Adams, who lives in Kendallville.

FARMER KICKED BY HORSE.

Warsaw, Ind., Dec. 11.—Newton Herendeen, a farmer residing east of Silver Lake, was badly injured by a kick from a horse. He was passing behind the animal when it suddenly kicked at him, striking him about the face and shoulder. The force of the blow was lessened somewhat because of the fact that Mr. Herendeen was so close to the animal, otherwise it is probable that the injury would have proven fatal. It is thought that Mr. Herendeen was rendered unconscious for a short time and he still was in a dazed condition when Mrs. Herendeen discovered him sitting on a log in the yard.

CHRISTMAS CASH IN AUBURN.

Auburn, Ind., Dec. 11.—Over $10,000 was turned loose in Auburn today when the Christmas Saving club organized by the Savings Loan & Trust company just a year ago began to liquidate. Between four and five hundred members of the club will receive checks varying in amounts in accordance with the classes in which they may have started when the club was organized. The exact sum to be paid out in checks is $10,128.22. The largest of the checks amounts to $65.47 and the minimum is $12.74.

VICTIM OF TRAGEDY IN FAR WEST.

Ligonier, Ind., Dec. 11.—The community was shocked Thursday when news reached the city announcing that Mrs. Mary Yeager-Stevens and her daughter, Miss Edith, had lost their lives when their home was destroyed by fire Tuesday night at Artesia, X. M. Particulars of the terrible affair are lacking. The brief news received by Mrs. Abe Yeager, an aunt in Ligonier, simply told of the cause of death and that the bodies would arrive at Kimmel Friday for burial. Mrs. Stevens was a daughter of the late Joel Yeager, buried here a few weeks ago. She was born in Ligonier and grew to womanhood here.

LIBERTY CENTER HAS FIRE.

Bluffton, Ind., Dec. 11.—The town of Liberty Center had an exciting experience Friday when the roof of the Frank Lee residence caught fire from a defective flue. Fortunately the fire was discovered before it gained great headway, and a bucket brigade which was quickly formed did valiant work, and the loss was confined to the destruction of the roof. A heavy fog and entire absence of wind aided the fire-fighters in preventing spread of the flames. The damage is covered by insurance.

Anderson Man Will Not Make Race for Governor.

Indianapolis, Dec. 10.—Fred Van Nuy of Anderson, has withdrawn as a democratic candidate for governor. The withdrawal also carried with it an announcement he would not be a candidate for congress from the Eighth district. It was expected this announcement would be made, as most democrats had not thought Van Nuy would continue in the race. Van Nuy says J. A. M. Adair is from his district, an older and more deserving man and entitled to his support. He also says he has not the financial requirements to make a primary race against Adair.

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING.

Isaiah 25:1-10.

1 O Lord, that art my God; I will exult thee, I will praise thy name, for thou hast done wonderful things; thy counsels of old are faithfulness and truth.

2 For thou hast made of a city an heap; of a defended city a ruin: a palace of strangers to be no city; it shall never be built.

3 Therefore shall the strong people glorify thee, the city of the terrible nations shall fear thee.

4 For thou hast been a strength to the poor, a strength to the needy in his distress, a refuge from the storm, a shadow from the heat, when the blast of the terrible ones is as a storm against the wall.

5 Thou shalt bring down the noise of strangers, as the heat in a dry place; even the heat with the shadow of a cloud; the branch of the terrible ones shall be brought low.

6 And in this mountain shall the Lord of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined.

7 And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the veil that is spread over all nations.

8 He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth: for the Lord hath spoken it.

9 And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him, and he will be glad and rejoice in his salvation.

10 For in this mountain shall the hand of the Lord rest, and Meab shall be trodden down under him, even as straw is trodden down for the dung-hill.

Reforming Muncie.

The Muncie case, in which Governor Ralston has served notice on Mayor Bunch that unless he enforces the law and cleans up the town the governor will be forced to take a hand and do it for him is bound to attract much interest all over the state. It has long been reasonably clear that Mayor Bunch's sympathies were decidedly with the wide-open element in the town; that he has permitted flagrant violations of the law and tolerated conditions repugnant to every sense of decency and order.

It is apparent that public patience at Muncie has been strained to the limit, and with impeachment charges filed the aid of the governor has been sought to enforce some respect for law and order on the part of the constituted authorities of that city. The governor has given the mayor fair warning. If he is compelled to take further steps, they are likely to be both drastic and effectual.

What evidence is in the hands of the governor regarding lawless conditions at Muncie has not yet been disclosed, but it is clear that a desperate situation must have been revealed in order to move the governor to interference. The state executive is naturally reluctant to meddle in the affairs of a city. It is going to be an awful shock to Mayor Bunch's administration to discover the hitherto unsuspected fact that there is a higher power than its own.

The recent sale of the Indiana Lighting company, of which the Fort Wayne artificial gas system is a part, marks the virtual retirement of the Murdock interests from Indiana public utilities, in which they have figured actively for more than a quarter of a century. "We are mighty glad to be out of it," Charles Murdock is quoted as having declared, "for public utilities are always a football for the public," and his statement is a truism that will be generally admitted. When the public longs to kick something, it usually finds a public service corporation near by and takes a wallop at that. Yet there are thousands of men in Indiana eager to take the job of being a public service corporation magnate, and those already at it manage to put up a pretty fair presentment of prosperity.

Official investigation has absolved Patrolman Glenn Johnson, whose name became involved in the disappearance of tickets from a local moving picture theater, and the officer has been permitted to resume his beat, so that the unfortunate incident is closed. Patrolman Johnson was credited with the statement that the affair was the outcome of an effort of others on the force to "get him," and that is the phase of the affair most important to the public. If there is discord, bickering and petty jealousy in the police ranks, there cannot be high grade police service. Police Chief Lenz owes it to the city to unload the trouble-makers and the incompetents, and we trust he will promptly and effectively address himself to that task. It may not be a pleasant one, but it is highly essential.

There will be genuine regret over the state, regardless of party affiliation, that it is the precarious state of health that has led to the retirement of Hugh Th. Miller from the race for the republican senatorial nomination. Indiana came to know Mr. Miller during his term as lieutenant governor, it entertains for him a large degree of respect and friendship, and he is distinctly an asset to his party in this state. It is profoundly hoped that he may be successful in his battle against disease which has laid its hand upon him.

There have been some extremely brief honeymoons in Fort Wayne, but in the light of that Whitley county case in which suit for divorce is filed three days after the nuptial ceremony, it is hardly worth while for any of the local aspirants for records in briefness of wedded bliss to enter the contest for the Northern Indiana championship. That Whitley county couple has won it, hands down.

Colonel Roosevelt has declined an invitation to deliver an address in Canada because he says he cannot trust himself to talk on the war in a foreign land. Occasionally the ex-president manifests a degree of discretion hitherto wholly unsuspected by his enemies who insist Colonel Roosevelt can always be depended upon to spill the beans.

So many federal probes of one thing and another are under way that one is moved to profound respect for the inventive genius that discovers so many things that need an investigation. Moreover, the new cases developing almost daily indicate that there is no danger whatever of a shortage in the supply.

Various business organizations are now suggesting amendments to the new seaman's law. Haven't you noted as an American characteristic that we no sooner get a law of any kind than we proceed to want it changed?

MR. MARSHALL

Shall we hear anything further about denying Vice President Marshall's re-nomination?

Whatever there was to the gossip grew out of a story that Mr. Marshall was not "sound" on cloture; that he would not rule as desired last winter. Hence the suggestion of a different running-mate for Mr. Wilson. The hope was that Mr. Marshall would see the point, and rule "right" this winter and thus save his scalp.

If there was anything to the story alleging hostility on Mr. Marshall's part to gag rule for the senate, he stands abundantly vindicated now. No such procedure is possible. After a halcyon and vociferous examination the democratic caucus put the proposition to sleep. Whatever change may be made at this session, the senate will remain a deliberative body. Cloture, in the sense of a partisan asset to be used for partisan purposes—and that was the essence of the maneuver—is out of the question, fortunately for the senate, the country and the democratic party. No greater mistake could have been made.

Those who thus gossiped at Mr. Marshall's expense showed neither knowledge of the man, nor appreciation of the democracy's needs. He could get along without his party much better than his party without him. Denied endorsement, he could return to Indiana, reopen his law office, enjoy again the society of his old friends and neighbors, and get more and bigger fees than ever.

But his party next year will require to be brought as closely as possible to the people; and Mr. Marshall figures in popular discussion as "the human element of the democratic outfit." The meaning of the phrase is that he is the best politician in the bunch, understands the everyday order of things much better than the others, and scores more readily with the rank and file of voters. While the president is bookish, and a trifle reserved, Mr. Marshall is practical, hearty and in every way companionable.

If the ticket is not Wilson and Marshall again, the talents of a Philadelphia lawyer will be necessary to explain why. The reasons, geographical and other, that called him to the colors in 1912 still exist; and he has added to his strength by nearly three years of satisfactory service in the office to which he was then elected. Where could his party find his superior for the race?

STRAIGHT TALK ON ROADS

(Indiana Daily Times).

Much solid truth and food for reflection is to be found in the report of the good roads commission informally appointed some time ago by Gov. Ralston. This non-partisan commission, serving without pay and without legislative authority, nevertheless has rendered good service. It would be more than justified if for no other reason than the fact that it has boiled down for the taxpayer to study, the actual road conditions as they exist in the state. Indiana's road troubles are enumerated by the commission briefly as follows:

"From almost every section of the state come complaints of unsatisfactory road conditions, either roads bad, not properly maintained, or cost excessive—frequently all three."

"The post-office department reports 21,000 miles of post roads in Indiana in bad condition the whole or part of the year."

"The office of public roads report much unfit material is used by honest officials, because the state has no skilled department and laboratory to test the same for county and township officials."

"Thousands lose their lives each year by grade crossing and other road accidents. County and township officers can not negotiate effectively with railroads to correct this. A state department can."

"Indiana spends $15,000,000 each year, through 4,500 officials, for roads. Where does the money go? Is it honestly and efficiently expended? There is no one to gather and publish this information."

"The auto license tax is a state tax distributed to the counties to be expended on the roads. Has it been done? You don't know nor neither do we. There is no state officer to collect the information and report to the governor or the legislature."

"The law requires a map to be made in each county by the superintendent showing the improved roads, etc. Has it been done? If so there is no state official to bring the maps together and publish them for general benefit."

"No law requires any road official to be other than a qualified voter, and yet they have to do with technical and difficult matters. They have no skilled state official to whom they can go for plans, advice, etc."

These are things for Indiana people to ponder on.

A LOCAL COMPOSER'S SELECTION TO BE USED

Prof. H. H. Hahn is Author of New Composition of Christmas Songs.

The feature in many of the programs to be given in observance of Christmas at Fort Wayne churches will be the rendition of the "Wechsel Gesang Fuer Weihnachten" or "A Cycle of Christmas Carols," the new selection composed by Prof. Herman H. Hahn, of this city.

The author of this new and pretty composition is a teacher at the Emmanuel Lutheran parochial schools and is also the organist of the same congregation. A year ago he composed a Christmas carol, but the one this year surpasses it in every way. The composition is made up of many of the familiar Christmas songs woven together in a very unique way.

The new musical selection has been written for either the English or the German language and is considered by many authorities on music to be a selection of unusual attractiveness. Orders from all parts of the United States have been received, which is another proof of its success.

The St. John Reformed church, of this city, will feature this selection in the Christmas program to be rendered on Christmas eve.

Society

With the approaching holidays come rumors of entertaining. In some instances it is not a rumor, but a fact like the Woman's League ball on December 27. The dancing at this grand affair is not to be just a plain program of one-step, two-steps or any other number of steps that dancing masters have either invented or revived from times past. There are to be innovations in the way of favor dances, such as the new eastern figure known as the Japanese parasol dance, and possibly the garland dance. But these are merely a hint to whet the desire to go. There is to be good music for the dancing. Besides there are to be present many out of town guests, society people and several distinguished guests as well so that everyone will want to go all the more. As for those who do not dance, they will be just as welcome for there are to be card tables for a game of bridge, five-hundred, euchre or pedro or one may merely sit and look on and visit with friends. Only don't miss taking your invitation with you when you go.

IS A PROMISING YOUNG DANCER.

MISS ESTHER CENTLIVRE

Miss Esther Centlivre, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Centlivre, takes to dancing so naturally that she has made rapid progress in the few lessons she has taken. Naturally graceful and light of movement this young girl finds it an easy matter to pose and as she likes to work hard, too, there's no telling how much she can accomplish in a few years' time. This picture shows Miss Centlivre in a pose of a dance number she gave at a musical recital under the auspices of Mrs. E. H. Kirkland, who presented her voice students at the Orpheum theater on Saturday morning.

Arnam. Act 2 of Richard III is the lesson.

International peace is the big topic which the members of the Twentieth Century club will take up at the meeting next Thursday, with Mrs. E. H. Briggs. Constructive peace, forces opposed to peace and the future of war, war brides and "Moloch" are individual topics of a big program.

At the regular meeting of the Morning Musical society yesterday, non-members of the society who assisted in the program were Frederick Hughes, the excellent tenor of the Orpheum, who sang two numbers in a musically manner that was decidedly pleasing. George Baille, who played the second piano to Miss Helene Spindler's fine rendition of the MacDowell concerto in D minor and Miss Muriel Larimore, dance soloist and Margaret Fry, Grace Roman and Heber Strodel, dance pupils. The dancing was to music which Miss Spindler played and was all very pretty. Miss Spindler played as encore to the concerto, Homer Bartlett's "The Dragon Fly," a composition of which Americans can well be proud, knowing it was written by an American, especially if played with the delightful spirit in which Miss Spindler gave it. Miss Larimore's two dances were the "Snowflake," from the Snowflake ballet, and the water lily dance to music by MacDowell. Both dances were in costume and charming, the first displaying Miss Larimore's technique and fine toe work, and the latter a most artistic and delicate interpretation.

SYRUP OF FIGS FOR CROSS, SICK FEVERISH CHILD

If little stomach is sour, liver torpid or bowels clogged.

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it can not cause injury. No difference what ails your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages, and grown-ups are printed on each bottle. Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.—Advertisement.

FRIENDSHIP SAVED EXPLORER STEFANSSON

When Death Was Drawing Near, on the Barren Arctic Wastes.

By Jack Jungmeyer.

Seattle, Wash., Dec. 11.—After the world had given up Vilhjalmur Stefansson, Arctic explorer, as lost, friendship found a way to reach him.

It was the motive power that sent

Captain Louis Lane.

Captain Louis Lane, veteran whaler, beating up into the icy barrens where he recently found the explorer walking along a desolate coast under the midnight sun. The two have known each other for years.

Not only did Captain Lane give Stefansson a new security on life and make possible further scientific research, but he brought back one of the most remarkable stories of nerve and romance ever brooded in the north.

It is the story of Stefansson and his

His own life and that of his three companions, as well as the fate of the entire expedition, hinged on Stefansson's reliance that he could with guns alone secure ample provisions.

When Lane found his friend on August 10, off the north coast of Banks' Land, the latter had just completed a six months' sled trip across the icy wastes, during which time he had shot every particle of food used by himself and three companions.

Didn't Miss a Meal.
They had not carried a pound of supplies. The chance was sinister. But "Steff" had dared and fortune had favored ed him. Seal had fallen to his rifle so regularly that the party had not missed a single meal in nearly 200 days of travel.

It is by such chances that the intrepid Stefansson has been boring up into that misty region on top of the world where no man's foot had ever tracked.

It was because of such chances that the world had thought him lost.

But Captain Lane, himself a chance-taker, hoped, if he did not believe, that the doughty Norseman had won thru to his goal and was keeping vigil for supplies.

"Steff" Was Glad.

"Yes, he was glad to see me, was 'Steff,'" said Lane, laconically. "They—Stefansson, Storkinsen, Thompson and Anderson—had only a little flour, tea, strips of bacon and a few hundred rounds of ammunition left. They were facing winter in the barrens where game—seal and polar bear—is never dependable."

"I chartered my boat to Stefansson, supplied him with three years' provisions and killed a whale for his dogs. The party is now splendidly equipped, including the hardest and most dependable white men and natives in the north, as well as seasoned dog teams."

"Stefansson—mark my words—will accomplish great things. He is in a class entirely by himself as an explorer. He has just the necessary mind and spirit for such work. He is always cheerful; contented with little; can eat anything on earth and relish it; can out-stare any Eskimo and hasn't a yellow streak in his make-up."

"He could pack to the North Pole and give a pleasant tea party there, if he cared to, and bring back incontrovertible proof that he had been there. That's 'Steff.'"

Blonde Eskimos Aid Him.
"The Kogmalik tribe—the so-called 'Blonde Eskimo'—has discovered Stefansson's whereabouts and is moving up to his camp base on northern Banks' Land in a body. This winter there will be at least 600 of these natives, who fairly idolize Stefansson, at his outpost, to aid him in every way with his explorations. No worry need be entertained now as to his safety. Only about one tenth of the 100

LIEUT. COL. BROMWELL ENDS LIFE IN HAWAII

Army Engineer Often in Ft. Wayne on Canal Project Dies a Suicide.

Honolulu, Dec. 11.—Lieut. Col. Charles S. Bromwell, head of the army engineer corps here, shot and fatally wounded himself yesterday. He died two hours after the shooting. Mrs. Bromwell and her daughter, are in the United States, where the latter is attending school. The colonel was alone in his residence when the shooting occurred. Colonel Bromwell left his office at noon and is said to have been in apparent good spirits. It is believed by his friends here that he was driven to his death as the result of a nervous breakdown, caused by overwork. The shooting occurred in a bedroom at his residence. He was removed to the department hospital, but all efforts to save his life proved futile.

Colonel Bromwell, while stationed at Cleveland, was a frequent visitor to Fort Wayne in connection with the movement for the Toledo, Fort Wayne and Chicago canal, and many Fort Wayne men interested in that project formed his acquaintance.

FOOD SOURING IN STOMACH CAUSES INDIGESTION, GAS

"Pape's Diapepsin" ends all stomach distress in five minutes.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt, if you are gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.—Advertisement.

"In the line of fire in eastern France. This little tor returning to the shot-torn village with his mother found his home smashed but his dog had not deserted it."—ROBERT MINOR.

ENGLAND TO PUSH SLACKERS INTO WAR

London Clerks Must Give Way to Women and Take Up Army Life.

London, Eng., Dec. 11.—There will be no conscription in England—BUT every man medically fit for national service will be forced to volunteer. After Dec. 11, the "clacker" who fails to go into the army will be pushed. Every young man unmarried, medically fit, and not indispensable to any business of national importance, MUST FIGHT. Single men go first. The last bachelor shirker will be compelled before the conscription is called to that he and his have no stake in the country. He is invariably a small-salaried, city bred fellow, whose chief concern in life is confessedly "to sidestep any extra effort." Parents, wife, employer look in vain for any unselfish service from specimens of this familiar type.

December eleventh calls the roll of the Absolute Slacker. Months ago many thousands of the ilk rushed into the munitions factories eager to work for any wage, for no wage, in exchange for the blue badge which warned of recruiting officers.

Gallants, a grade less self-centered, jumped into matrimony to escape the challenge, "Single Men First." Too late they learn that no marriage contracted since Registration day, Aug. 15, will relegate a man to home work.

Still other eligibles planned to fly the country. The daily applications for passports rose from 25 to 500. For curiosity I looked over one such contingent. They were well-dressed, slack shouldered, good-looking, soft. And they were entirely unashamed of running away. Argument, cajolery, persuasion could not pierce their determination to "take life easy."

"Now a Draconian decree has insured them a degree of saving discipline. For today every Englishman is a prisoner on parole. Another will than his shall decide whether he shall fight, or work, for his country."

Great Britain is spending gigantic sums and must carefully husband all the resources. The makers of munitions and the industrial workers in essential trades and businesses, serve in the GREATER WAR WHICH IS BEHIND WAR.

For Great Britain must furnish her dominions and allies with $5,000,000 cash daily.

The French and Italian navies rely on English coal.

The armies of France and Russia are clothed in English cloth.

The munitions of Belgium and Serbia come from English factories.

Were English industry deprived of too many workers, English credit would be seriously shaken. Hence, in the midst of a world-wide war England must cope with an economic revolution.

All men, including the majority now engaged in munition making, must go into the army.

All married and elderly men who can be taken from business must enter the munition factories.

All work that can be done by women must be given to women.

The great servant class must be turned from domestic to industrial service.

In London alone 150,000 men clerks must give place to female substitutes.

Dec. 11, 1918, is the birthday of UNIVERSAL OBEDIENCE in England!

Englishmen and women will haggle no longer about the rights of the individual. For the individual has no rights when they interfere with the welfare of the nation.

Englishmen, Frenchmen, Belgians, Italians, Serbians, Japanese, Germans, all the great nations EXCEPT ONE are being trained in that stern school.

How will THEIR KNOWLEDGE effect OUR IGNORANCE after the war?

NOTICE.

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.
Chicago, Dec. 11.—Wheat developed material strength today after a weak start. The demand came chiefly from commission houses and seemed to be largely in the nature of a reaction from the effects of peace talk. After opening 1/2¢ off to 1/4¢ up, with December at $1.12 to $1.13 1/2 and May at $1.13 1/2 to $1.14 1/2, prices rose all around to well above yesterday's finish.

The close was firm, 1/2¢ to 1/4¢ net higher, with December at $1.13 1/2 and May at $1.15@1.15 1/2.
Predictions of unsettled weather had a bullish influence on corn. Opening prices, which ranged from 1/4¢ to 1/2¢ lower to a shade advance, were followed by a moderate general uptick.

The close was firm at 1/2¢ to 1/4¢ net advance.
Oats went higher with other cereals. There was no pressure to sell.
Provisions made gains notwithstanding a decline in the hog market. A little buying on the part of investors seemed to be responsible. Packers apparently were taking no hand on either side.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, Dec. 11.—A fairly active demand for railway shares infused general strength to today's market after an irregular opening. New York Central was the feature, advancing 2 1/4 to 10 1/4, its best price since 1913, on rumors of an early increase in the dividend. There was an inquiry for such specialties as General Motors, common and preferred, Studebaker, Texas company, Mercantile Marine preferred, all at substantial gains. United States Steel was heavy at first but moved forward with the balance of the list later. The closing was strong. Bonds were irregular.
Further heaviness was evinced by today's market in the initial dealings. U. S. Steel declining 1/2 to 8 1/2 on offerings of large blocks. War shares like Baldwin Locomotive, Crucible Steel, Pressed Steel Car and Studebaker were lower by substantial fractions. Among the railways Union Pacific, Erie and Canadian Pacific were under pressure, the latter soon declining on 1/2 to 17 1/2. Almost the only exceptions to the lowering tendency were Mercantile Marine preferred and International Nickel. Anglo-French bonds were stronger on futures sales.

Here's a group of old Fort Wayne photographs, made probably fifty years ago, by William Duncleburg, a pioneer photographer. The center is the old court house, made from the northwest corner, and showing a portion of the building that now is occupied by Al Riegel's cigar store. Note the distance over the right lawn, where one can see for several blocks through open fields.

David Compere, one of the early prominent residents of the city, is seen in the upper left hand corner. He was born here in 1831, the son of Francis Compere, and was active in the affairs of the city. He was married to Sarah Columbia, a member of another prominent early family, and after which, by the way, Columbia street was named. Charles Case, in the upper right hand corner, was an early attorney, whom the historians tell us, "was noted for his kind deeds and lovable actions." He certainly was a mixer and a real for sure politician, for he once defeated J. L. Worden, and once R. J. Dawson for congress, winning both his big majorities. Francis Aveline was a member of a prominent French family here in the early days. He is seen in the lower right hand corner. It was he who built the old Penn house, north of the city, on the Leo road, ninety years ago, and operated it as the county's first wayside inn, and he later built and managed the old Aveline house, that stood on the site of the present Shoff building. In the lower left hand corner is seen the father of Councillor, Eugene R. Smith, J. M. Smith, an early politician in this city and for years a prominent figure in the community. The pictures were dug up at Grand Rapids recently, and were brought here by a former Fort Wayne man. They are small in the originals, and are greatly enlarged as they appear in the paper.

ill health and cheered him in temporary reverses.

Holt, unmarried, was 53 years old when he died.

Miss Joe Susuki came to Seattle from Japan 16 years ago, drifting into the hotel owned by William Holt as a chambermaid with other women of her race. She soon displayed executive ability and a rare capacity to look after essential details. Holt made her manager of his hotel.

She soon became Holt's confidante, adviser and friend. She learned to speak English fluently.

The $150,000 estate, including some of the finest fruit land in the state and a half interest in the hotel, was Holt's testimonial to the loyalty and efficiency of the little brown woman.

To the Occidental eye, Miss Susuki seems not to be affected in the least by the big change which has come into her life.

"I think I shall spend most of my time on the fruit ranch which he left me, in Yakima county," she said, in almost perfect English.

Next year, perhaps, she would journey to her home "in the old country" and see her parents, who live in Central Japan. Perhaps she would bring some of her relatives back with her.

"I will need some one to work the ranch," she explained. "I cannot look after it alone."

"You ask me so soon," she said, her pearl-white teeth flashing in a smile. "I have made no plans yet—no definite plans."

"Mr. Holt was always a nice man," she said slowly. "He was kind and gentle and good. He was always trying to do good. You met him once and then you liked him always after that. Everybody did. He had many friends."

An Old, Family Cough Remedy, Home-Made

Easily Prepared—Costs Very Little, but is Prompt, Sure and Effective

By making this pint of old-time cough syrup at home you not only save about $2, as compared with the ready-made kind, but you will also have a much more prompt and powerful remedy in every way. It overcomes the usual coughs, throat and chest colds in 24 hours—relieves even whooping cough quickly—and is excellent, too, for bronchitis, bronchial asthma, hoarseness and spasmodic croup.

Get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a pint bottle and add the following: With plain granulated sugar syrup. Full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and tastes good.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. It quickly loosens the dry, hoarse or painful cough and heals the inflamed membranes. It also has a remarkable effect in overcoming the persistent loose cough by stopping the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes.

The effect of Pinex on the membranes is known by almost every one. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract combined with guaraniol and other natural healing pine elements.

There are many worthless imitations of this famous mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

SYNOPSIS

Old Cyrus Martin, the head of the American soap trust, makes a bet of $30,000 with a friend, John Clark, a rival soapmaker, that his (Martin's) son Rodney would be making more money at the end of a year than Clark's son Ellery.

Martin takes his pretty secretary, Mary Grayson, into his confidence and enlists her co-operation. Rodney has been a spendthrift, and the father wants to make him reform and go to work.

Mary meets Rodney, and the son proposes marriage to her. Rodney tells his father about his proposal, and the old man pretends great anger. He tells Mary he will disinherit Rodney.

Rodney defies his father, and Mary is deeply touched at the lad's genuine affection for her. Mary makes a financial bargain with Martin to encourage the son to go to work.

Ambrose Peale, press agent, meets Rodney and agrees to go into business with the lad on a salary basis. Rodney has resolved to go into the soap industry and buck the trust.

Rodney, Peale and Mary go into the soap trade together. Rodney then endeavors to borrow $10,000 as capital for his newly formed company.

The offices of the "13 Soap Company" are opened, and they advertise it as "the most expensive soap in the world." Peale talks advertising continually.

The 13 Soap company finds its expenses very heavy, and financial rocks loom ahead. Their chief business seems to have been to spend money for advertising under Peale's directions.

An alleged countess, who has appeared on the scene, desires to purchase the French rights for the sale of "13 Soap" and produces a draft for $20,000, which she desires to have cashed.

The "countess" is shown to be an impostor and despatch settles over the 13 Soap company. The firm introduces her, however, to Ellery Clark. Father Martin visits the office.

Martin, fearing rumors that the new company would injure his business and might break the trust, offers to buy out the firm for $100,000 and give Rodney, Peale and Mary good positions. Then he learns that the company is "dead broke."

Suddenly out of a clear sky comes an order for 50,000 cakes of 13 Soap from the great firm of Brown & James of Chicago. "The tide has turned," the trio now declare.

The 13 Soap company having no factory cannot deliver. The trio endeavor to buy the cakes from branch offices of the Martin trust. They fail to get the necessary number, but send 5,000 cakes.

Mary, in despair, calls on old Martin. Rodney also appears. They learn that the father caused the sending of the telegram from Brown & James. Naturally they are amazed and mortified.

Peale arrives. He discourses at length to old Martin on the value of advertising and explains that the money spent on booming 13 Soap was not wasted. Martin is unconvinced.

At last the partial shipment of 13 Soap, which had been sent to Chicago, begins to sell. Brown & James send a man to the Martin home to announce that the 5,000 cakes were gone at 12 apiece. They want more.

Martin, astonished, is forced to realize that Peale's advertising did it all. A deal is finally concluded in which for a big sum Brown & James take over the trademark and formula of 13 Soap.

Martin discovers that Mary and Rodney have married, and he wins his bet with Ellery Clark's father. That "it pays to advertise" the old man will never again deny.

CHAPTER XVIII.

A Wedding.

MARTIN looked at Peale again. Ambrose's mission had succeeded in a way he did not suspect.

"Mr. Peale, I like you," said old Martin.

"Huh!" said Peale.

"Have a cigar?" asked Martin.

Ambrose took it, feeling better than he had felt for many days.

He wondered idly what that butler guy meant presently when he stuck his head in and announced to his master that he had telephoned that party, who was at his office now. He heard Martin mutter:

"Good, good. Peale, I've got to go out on an important soap deal. Oh, by George, I nearly forgot," he added.

"There's another matter I must attend to first. Peale, you'll find the countess in there. Do the best you can. We'll settle the details when I get back. Make yourself at home."

Sure. This cigar's great company," said Peale. He strutted up and down cockily on the thick rug. He must attend to the countess, he remembered, and no fooling. So he went over to the door behind which she was hiding and threw it open with a flourish of fake French.

"Countess de Bull Run," he rattled on. "De jule-de jule-pollern noblesse oblige."

"You ought to take up French, Ambrose," she said sweetly. "Your accent's immense. Well, little sweetheart."

"Say, what are you doing in these parts?" Peale interrupted her.

"Oh, I came to see Mr. Martin," she said lightly.

"What for?"

There Was a "Grand Makeup."

Last days had been blue, for Rodney and Mary they had been all the color of roses.

Much history had passed over their heads as well as the company's in the hours leading up to their visit to Mr. Martin's library and their foregathering there with Ambrose and the countess. The order from Brown & James had begun it, and that was really the soap king's fault, since he had waved his monopolistic wand and caused the false order to spring up out of the ground, and Mary's $5,000 contribution to the soap company's capital had developed it, which may also be said to have been the fault of the old magnate.

The Brown & James order was especially to blame, however, because it had made the future look assured and rosy and encouraging, so that together they had taken the plunge. In the illuminated moments which followed the 50,000 dash Mary's reluctance had disappeared. Rodney's ardor had redoubled, and in the reaction of a lovers' quarrel and a "grand makeup," as Mary said, they had gone off to the Little Church Around the Corner and been married. That was the whole story. Really and truly it was all old Mr. Martin's fault and prearranged by him from the beginning, as Mary told herself again and again, defending herself against Rodney's father's possible wrath when the news of his son's marriage to a typewriter should be broken gently to him.

The quarrel came, as quarrels and April showers are apt to do, out of a clear and serene sky. In the general jubilation over Brown & James Rodney had remarked, sporting Mary up town at night, that now the first thing he was going to do with his share of the profits was to pay her back that $5,000.

"And then," he added sentimentally, "there won't be anything between us any more."

Something in the tone of his voice, quite unintentional on the boy's part, so doubt, had piqued Mary.

"You've always hated me," she said.

Something in the way she said the word fussed piqued Rodney.

"And don't you think it's been something to fuss about?" he demanded.

"When a fellow's best girl, his fiancée, takes money from a rich old man, and then the fellow lets her lose it all in his business—well, I don't see why you can't see that the situation's pretty raw."

"Why do you say lost? I hope you don't think it's really lost," retorted Mary. "Don't be such a gloomy Gus."

"Well, you know what I mean," persisted Rodney. "It was darned near lost. And that shows you do care about it anyway."

"Why shouldn't I care about it?" said Mary. "Indeed I think $5,000 is a good deal of money."

"I think it's a whole lot of money," said Rodney, "and you must excuse me if I can't help wondering how a girl in your position was able to get hold of it."

"A girl in my position," echoed Mary scornfully. "That's right. Rub it in. I'm really ashamed of you, Rodney Martin. And you know perfectly well I wasn't born a typewriter."

"Mary," he said, trying to be perfectly calm and persuasive, "tell me now. You know we shall be happier."

"I don't know it at all," said Mary obstinately.

"Mary, please," he said, trying to take her hand.

"No," said Mary. "I don't believe you'd like me if you knew."

"Please," persisted Rodney.

The long, uniform rows of New York house fronts stretched away on either side of them in the obscurity. A red light twinkled in one bay window, and beneath the shade could be seen the rows of books in a library. Near the curb opposite an extraordinarily silent limousine had just drawn up, with a little swish of its rubber tires as it came to rest, and presently a man and a woman in joyous evening raiment came out of the house and got into it.

The woman wore a perfectly gorgeous opera cloak, and combs flashed in her beautifully arranged hair. The man's linen was very white and his silk hat very shiny. The chauffeur had switched on the light inside the car, and the occupants showed a moment brilliantly in the jewel box of its interior before the light went out and the car moved off again, west and south, to the haunts of pleasure, as Ambrose Peale would have said. A throb and a sob came into Mary's voice as she saw it all, and she answered again:

"You might hate me. And I'm taking you away from all that, which was yours by right."

"Come in a moment," said Rodney gently and kindly.

They climbed the stairs together, and a West Indian "butler" let them in. Rodney drew Mary into a hideous little reception room on the ground floor, took both the girl's hands in his and looked earnestly into her lovely eyes.

"You're the finest girl in the world, Mary," he said, "and nothing could ever turn me against you."

In the ill lighted, ill ventilated little parlor, illuminated for them with love's thousand eyes, the truth came out. Mary told the whole story from the beginning, not without some humor and not without some satisfaction at certain portions of it, but must be confessed; told of old Mr. Martin's fretting about Ellery Clark, of the bet with Ellery's father, of her share in the deception and of her reward in money.

"What do I care if you really love me," protested Rodney. "Mary, now you must marry me."

That was a Thursday, and by Friday night they were married, so that they could have two days of honeymoon, anyway, before Monday, Rodney said. It was all very quietly arranged in the little church.

So much for those who talk about telepathy. Late Saturday forenoon, when they sneaked down to the office, just to be sure that everything was all right, certainly no one guessed what momentous change had come into their lives; no one divined the ecstasy that thrilled unseen beneath their everyday demeanor.

Of course old Mr. Martin's obduracy had been a blow, but Rodney was game throughout and gloriously happy. He felt every inch a man now and dared to cope with every difficulty.

"What do we tell the old gentleman?" he asked Mary, meaning of course the fact of their being married.

"No, indeed, not yet," said Mary, blushing ever so little. "Just let me wait for the psychological moment."

CHAPTER XIX.

A Wedding Present.

RODNEY and Mary waited, and love was rewarded once more by nothing less ethereal than a second order for soap that very morning. It was from Dockery's, and this time they simply must fill it. They both agreed, wherefore they had down town at night, that now the first thing he was going to do with his share of the profits was to pay her back that $5,000.

"And then," he added sentimentally, "there won't be anything between us any more."

Something in the tone of his voice, quite unintentional on the boy's part, so doubt, had piqued Mary.

"You've always hated me," she said.

Something in the way she said the word fussed piqued Rodney.

"And don't you think it's been something to fuss about?" he demanded.

Just after they got to the office that morning a letter from Dockery's had come in.

"Ordering 10,000 cakes of 13 Soap," interrupted Rodney.

"Now what do you think of that?" said Mary.

"Pinch me—I'm dreaming," Peale told her.

"They say our advertising's wonderful," went on Rodney, "and has created such a demand they want to handle the soap in town."

Rodney went on:

"You see, when I show father this letter from Dockery's he's got to admit we've won out—and supply us with soap."

"Suppose he's still stubborn and won't help us, what shall we do?" asked Mary.

"Oh, we'll just have to plod along," said Rodney.

"Don't plod—gallop, son—gallop—gallop," amended Peale, full of his high spirits.

"If we ever come out of this you're going to be my partner, fifty to fifty," declared Rodney.

"Mr. Charles Bronson," Johnson announced.

"Oh, I beg pardon! I expected to find Mr. Martin," said Mr. Bronson, entering.

"I am Mr. Martin," spoke up Rodney. "Mr. Rodney Martin?" pursued Bronson.

"Yes," said Rodney.

"Just the man I wanted to see—on private business," said Bronson.

"Oh, these are my partners," said Rodney. "You can talk before them. This is Mr. Peale and Miss Grayson."

"May I present—Mr—"

"Charles Bronson of Brown & James."

The man from Chicago went straight on with his errand.

"Now about your soap?"

"Now see here," protested Rodney.

"O Lord," thought Peale, then added aloud politely, "We're very sorry—"

Mr. Bronson looked at the three in a kind of busy wonder.

"Sorry?" he said. "Why, your 13 Soap the last few days has had a most remarkable sale at our store in Chicago."

Rodney gasped:

"You mean it is really selling?"

"Why, you seem surprised," said Bronson, studying their faces.

Mary pulled herself together briskly, the first of them all.

"Oh, not—not a bit," she repudiated.

Peale looked to know the whole truth.

"You mean people are actually coming into the store and buying it?" he went on.

"At a dollar a cake," said Bronson.

"It was those page advertisements in Chicago that did it," conceded Mary.

"Absolutely," said Peale.

Mr. Bronson wanted to know if they would keep up their campaign. That would have some bearing, of course, on the subject in hand.

"Triple it," said Peale from the bottom of his heart.

"Good, good," said Mr. Bronson.

"We foresee a tremendous sale for your goods. It's an amazing soap. Do you control the company yourself?"

"Oh, entirely," said Rodney.

"Then I can deal with you," Bronson began again.

"With us—all of us," Rodney asserted, and Bronson went on:

"We should be glad to contract now for 250,000 cakes, with deliveries to begin next week."

Mary, whose brain had been going like lightning, now took a hand.

"Our capacity just at present is limited," she said cautiously.

"Yes, we have so many orders on hand," agreed Rodney. "Here's an idea."

he said. "In view of our press of orders, would you entertain the idea of paying us merely for the use of our trademark, without any soap at all?"

"Yes, I think we would," Bronson said.

"Your trademark is, of course, your biggest asset. You would give us your formula?"

"Yes, if we still have that cook book," blurted Peale.

"I beg pardon," said Bronson.

"Nothing, nothing. Have a cigar," said Peale.

"I've got the cook book," said Mary.

"You can have the formula," Rodney agreed.

Mr. Bronson cleared his throat and went on:

"With a license from you to use the title, I daresay we could arrange to have the soap manufactured by Cyrus Martin of the soap trust."

"How much would you pay for the trademark?" put in Mary.

"I should have to call up our Chicago office," said Bronson. "But I think I can safely say we should be prepared to offer you at least $250,000."

Peale gasped, but controlled himself in time to say "Indeed!" in a very genteel tone of voice.

"Can I have an option at that figure?" pursued Bronson.

"Yes," said Mary.

"Yes," said Peale.

"No," said Mary again, loudly and resolutely.

"No," said Rodney, following her lead.

"Haden't we better discuss the matter a little more fully first among ourselves?" she said sweetly.

"Yes," said Mr. Bronson tactfully.

"Perhaps I could wait somewhere for a few minutes."

"Yes, do please—in the next room," suggested Mary.

Mr. Bronson stepped to the door.

The door had no sooner closed on Mr. Bronson than the board of directors of the 13 Soap company went into immediate special session.

"Why not give him an option at a quarter of a million?" asked Rodney.

"Because maybe we can get more money than that out of your father," Mary said quietly.

Rodney kissed her. Peale coughed.

Mary said nothing more, for at that moment she spied Johnson coming up, and the sight of him helped give her an idea.

"Johnson, oh, Johnson, you know I've always liked you," she began, attracting his attention vehemently.

"Will you do me a favor?"

"What do you want?"

"Only that I thought I'd handle your soap."

"When Mr. Martin comes back do tell him that Rodney and Mr. Peale are here or Bronson either. Say I'm alone."

"Yes, miss, but Mr. Martin has just driven up in his car. He'll be here directly."

"Hurry up, then. Tell him I'm here waiting for him," said Mary.

Johnson went out obediently.

"I've got a great idea," said Mary. "You two boys go into that room and stay there. Now listen. Keep Bronson there. When I ring this buzzer twice you call me on this phone—there's a switch in there—and never mind what I say. Now hurry. I'm going to try to make a deal with your father."

They went out reluctantly. Mr. Martin came in.

"Hello, Miss Grayson," he said, seeing her; "this is another pleasant surprise. Where is Rodney?"

"That doesn't matter. I'm here," said Mary demurely.

"Where's that—that Mr.—" he began.

"Mr. Peale?" said Mary. "Oh, Mr. Peale's gone back to the office, but he told me to tell you that he'd got that contract—"

"Oh, he did, did he?" said Martin.

"Great, great! He's a smart boy."

"We are all smart," said Mary. "It's a smart firm. We've just got a letter from Dockery's for 10,000 cakes of 13 Soap, and this time you didn't send the telegram."

"Dockery's, eh? Well, well! Now I'll be frank," he said. "I want Rodney to come in with me—and you've got to help. You started this scheme. Now finish it up."

"What's changed you all of a sudden?" asked Mary.

"Well, Dockery's, for one thing," said the old gentleman. "That shows sensational advertising does pay. Those boys are right. I've been too conservative, but anyhow I've got the whip hand. Rodney can't get his soap for Dockery's except from me, and if I'm going to furnish 3 cent soap that he sells wholesale for 60 cents, I'm going to be in on the profits. Any young man who can do that is just bound to have me for a partner, whether he wants me or not. What do you say, Miss Grayson?"

"I'll do all I can for Rodney," said Mary, looking down.

"Good. Now, what's your proposition?" he inquired, sitting down.

"Five hundred thousand dollars cash," said Mary quietly.

"What?" yelled Mr. Martin.

"That isn't all. We are to get 51 per cent of the stock, you put up a factory and give Rodney $50,000 a year. Peale $30,000 and me $20,000."

Mr. Martin whistled.

"As my son once observed, what lovely weather we're having," he said.

"Hurrah, Mary! It's all right now!"

Mary pushed the buzzer twice. Almost instantly the telephone rang.

"Shall I answer it?" said Mary politely.

"Go ahead—say I'm out," Martin grunted.

"Oh, hello," said Mary in the telephone, adding in an aside to Mr. Martin, "It's for me. Hello, Rodney—you've seen Bronson?"

"Bronson?" repeated Mr. Martin.

"He did?" said Mary in the telephone; "why, that's a splendid offer. I hardly dared think Brown & James would be so generous."

"I'll accept your proposition, Mrs. Grayson," interrupted Mr. Martin hastily.

"Wait," said Mary. "Have you closed with Bronson yet?" she went on.

"Oh, you haven't?"

"Good," grunted Mr. Martin.

"No," Mary went on, "I think you'd better come right up from the office and see me before you sign anything."

"Here, let me talk to him," Mr. Martin said, and reached for the phone.

"Oh, hello, hello," called Mary quickly and giggled the bell. "Oh, dear, we've been cut off."

"I'm grateful to you," said Mr. Martin.

"Shall we sign a memorandum now?" asked Mary a little nervously.

"Sure—sure—just the rough details," he agreed.

"Sure, never put off till tomorrow what you can sign today," said Mary.

Mr. Martin began to write:

"Fifty-one per cent—Rodney—fifty thousand—And what's that young man's name again—Sple?"

"Peale," said Mary.

"That certainly is one dickens of a name—$30,000—Grayson $20,000—there. You sign here."

"No, you sign first," said Mary. He obeyed.</

WINTER SPORTS AGAIN ARE COMING INTO THEIR OWN IN FORT WAYNE

Key to Illustrations

Lower left, A beginner learning the ropes.

Lower right, "But this is dangerous," they said as they dodged automobiles.

Lower strip, Line-up of Hamilton school kiddies on Reservoir lake.

The snow of the past ten days, accompanied by the first crisp weather of the winter, has brought winter sports into Fort Wayne. And in this winter sports do not include polo, or pugilism. For winter sports are here, even where the morning snow does not survive to greet the eve.

The camera man went gunning for participants. He found them, big bunches of them, scattered all over town. In the west end five youngsters were hilariously coasting down an ash heap in the back yard. True, it wasn't a long coast and it terminated on a bare alley pavement, but it was an opportunity to slide, and slide they did.

And a little distance away two boys and a girl on a trio of sleds were enjoying a sport in which the danger lent a tang. Adventure may be lured to their habitat along a hundred complex passageways. The bright face of danger smiles on men and children with an equal luminescence. So these three West Berry street kiddies heard the call and responded, and were found by the man sheltering coasting down into the street from a little elevation by the sidewalk.

"Don't you ever coast down the river bank?" inquired the always inquisitive scribbler.

"Us? I should say not," answered the feminine side of the triangle, (for they learn the art of conversation at an age wherein mere manikin stutters easily abashed). "They won't let us, it's too dangerous. Course it's kind o' dangerous here, always dodging the automobiles."

There you are, it's kind o' dangerous—there is the tang that makes the fruit the sweeter. But there were youngsters coasting too, in places where danger never showed its pleasant face. On the hillsides in Swinney park, in sloping back yards, as down the stub ends of little used streets. For coasting is coming back to its own as a sport for the cold months of the year.

But coasting wasn't the only thing the gunner pulled the trigger on. For there were skaters galore on the three pools some humorist of a decade ago called lakes and has taught us to call by the same name.

At reservoir park, with the ice as thin

as a patent medicine "ad," before taking hundreds of boys and girls skate every noon before school, and the evening finds mere grown-ups testing the strength of the inch-thick covering. The kiddies from the Hamilton school congregate at the lake each noon about 12:45, and they stay until some watchful waiter announces that it's nearly time for the dread last bell.

At Lakeside park the ice is covered with people nearly all day and the evening finds it crowded, while at Swinney park the lake is only partly frozen, yet there are some who venture on its surface.

In Old Fort Wayne.

But the winter sports have degenerated in Fort Wayne. There was a time when the oldest of us were young, when there was ice enough here to lure the most timid and unenthusiastic to its surface.

Fort Wayne had the Wabash and Erie canal. It was a long narrow body of water to swim in in summer and skate on in winter, and incidentally had some boats and packets upon its placid bosom.

In the old days, when printers could set from manuscript and the fire department was on Court street, William P. Cooper was engaged in the gentle art of supplying information for the reading public. Mr. Cooper had a pair of prize comedy acts that appeared each year in his valuable publication. On the coldest day he wrote:

"The boys were swimming in the canal today." However, when the sun melted the pitch from the cedar blocks on Calhoun street and the cheese and gunpowder intermingled these fragrances at Calhoun and Wayne streets, Mr. Cooper wrote that "the boys are skating on the canal."

There was one place that was considered better suited than any other for winter sports, and that was a boudoir in the canal bed along what is now the Nickel Plate freight house and the Randall hotel. This was called "the basin" and it was here that old Fort Wayne skated to its heart's content.

Coasting in the old days was good along Harnar street in the vicinity of the Compartment residence, and down the canal banks east of the city. But in more recent years the old homestead, now Beachwood place, afforded coasting for boys and girls, as did the old Monroe street hill. Here you could start at the top of an incline, coast down the bank, across the canal (for a pool remained there until a few years ago), over the Nickel Plate tracks, and then again down the bank and out over the Maumee river. It required a fatal accident to stop the practice.

And the bed of Shawnee creek used to afford a risk of no mean proportions. Here was the little winding stream, running through town, and always at somebody's back door.

There was the happy days! But wait a minute. Advice from New York, Kansas City and Muskegon, Michigan, indicate a return of the skating craze. It seems the winter sports will come into their own after a lapse of a number of years, and if that is the case, it's time for Fort Wayne to get ready.

And in our program of preparedness, let us start with the preparing of the ice on the reservoir, Swinney park and Lakeside. An occasional scraping wouldn't hurt it a bit.

ASKS CLERK'S RESIGNATION.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 11.—Dr. John N. Hurty, state health commissioner, Monday said he had asked for the resignation of a postoffice clerk in a small Indiana city because complaint had reached the state board of health that the clerk is affected with tuberculosis, and mail passing through his hands might transmit disease. Dr. Hurty said this was the third similar case that had reached the attention of the state board, and that in two former instances the clerks in question had resigned. Local officers are asked by the state board to inform such persons that outside life is the only possible method of cure, and efforts are put forth to find suitable employment for such persons in other parts of the state.

CONCORDIA MEETS WABASH HERE TONIGHT

Old Rivals Come to Fort Wayne for Fling at Basketball.

Concordia has formed a pretty good habit in recent years and that is booking only the best teams that it can get. That is why no one feels that the collegians are disgraced by a defeat at any time for the boys are tackling nothing but the strongest teams.

Tonight they have with them the Wabash A. A. basketballers, a crowd of huskies well known in this city. It ought to be a good game, for the locals have been putting in some hard licks and will show at their best tonight.

NORTHERN MAY QUIT.

Duluth, Minn., Dec. 11.—Whether the Northern league would enter the field again next year was to be decided at a meeting of baseball presidents which began here today. President Harry A. Blume, of the Duluth club, said that in view of conditions in Canada as a result of the war he would oppose any attempt to arrange a 1916 schedule. It was said that delegates opposed to President John Burmeister would attempt to elect to the presidency Charles Moll, former president of the Wisconsin-Illinois league, and now head of the St. Boniface, Manitoba, club.

Beginning Activity Rather Early in the Winter, Nicht War, Central Bosses?

Yesterday was the time set for the already once postponed meeting of Central league directors. And behold ye, they didn't meet. Of course it's mighty fine to be energetic and get busy early in the winter, but when it comes to picking up money you have to let Christmas pass and be started into the new year. It might be well to hold the meeting say on Saturday, Jan. 8, or even a week later. That would give the uncertain cities a chance to put up their money.

DUCKY HOLMES GETS EXTENSION OF TIME

Ducky Holmes, who is forming a stock company to purchase the Lincoln Western league franchise from Hugh Jones, has secured an extension of his option until Jan. 1, by which time he expects to have the full amount raised and complete the deal. The price set on the club by Jones is $13,000, and Holmes has $10,000 in sight in subscriptions.

EARL YINGLING STILL IS THERE

Earl Yingling, one time Central league favorite, and hurler for several Central clubs, is making a considerable young record in the American association. He spent the season with Minneapolis, and stood second among the league pitchers.

FATHER USES BOXING GLOVES TO KEEP SON AT HOME; BOY MAY BE CHAMP.

Bryan Downey

Bryan Downey, a lightweight, who is slowly edging his way to the top, is one of those who did not have to run away from home to become a fighter.

He is not one of the many who, when their parents learned they wanted to be fighters, were given the choice of giving up their ambition or leaving the family residence.

In the first place Downey did not actually choose fighting as his profession. It was sort of urged upon him by his father. In the second place, it was his father who taught him to box and it was in his father's stable that he got his first hard knocks.

Downey was raised in Columbus, O. His father bought boxing gloves and provided room in the stable where the boys, several brothers and kids from the neighborhood could box. The elder Downey did not look down upon boxing as a rough neck sport, but as a means of keeping his boy at home.

"I'd rather have my boy boxing at home than loafing around street corners," said the elder Downey.

Bryan showed up so well against the kids of the neighborhood and took to boxing so rapidly his father got a hunch that the boy could be developed into a champion. The father became the boy's trainer, then his manager, got matches for him and has seconded him in all his fights.

Downey is only 18 but has a good record. He has been in 22 bouts and scored 11 knockouts. He has never been beaten.

The boy scored knockouts in his first four bouts. At another period of his career he scored three consecutive knockouts. He has boxed no decision affairs with Ritchie Mitchell, Young Goldie, Patsy Kilne, Cal Delaney and Patsy McMahon.

He handed the sleep wallop to Johnny Papke, a brother of Billy, in five rounds; Frankie Daley in six; Willie Jones in 12; Willie Jennings and Matty Callit in one round each.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH THE MUSKIES?

Do Our Good Little Neighbors Want to Be Coaxed?

Muskegon, Mich., Dec. 11.—If the Central league magnates mean business when they say that Muskegon can have ball of that class next season if 500 season tickets are sold, in the opinion of baseball fans in this city a franchise in the association might just as well be forwarded to the Sawdust city at once. If the Central officials begin to tuck on other qualifications to be looked upon as necessary for the coming of class B ball to Muskegon, it is very likely that these magnates will be forced to look elsewhere. For, with the greatest industrial boom in its history now being experienced by Muskegon, this city is in reality too busy to bother to any great extent with baseball. That is, at least to the extent of guaranteeing receipts and furnishing a park, and other countless details which some leagues always demand in order that they may be able to make the American pastime staging not a business venture, but a sure thing of the I-win-you-lose variety.

If the Central circuit wants to use the old Recreation park grounds, the same baseball park as was used when Michigan State league ball was staged here, there is no question but that it may have these grounds gratis. If it is satisfied with the sale of 500 season tickets, there is little or no question that that encouragement can be secured. But further than that the erecting of stands on a new downtown park, the building of bleachers, to mean the expenditure of several thousand dollars for a private money making proposition here seems very unlikely.

Muskegon furnished 300 or more season tickets at $15 a pasteboard two years ago, and a $1,200 bonus as well, for class D pastime, only to see its men go salary-less for the last two weeks of the season.

But never again. Muskegon baseball fans see an almost sure chance of selling 500 season tickets if a proper campaign can be waged here and if the chamber of commerce is willing to get behind and boost. Beyond that they are not in reality overly enthusiastic. This, think they, ought to be enough to give Muskegon Central league ball, since it is far and away over the total receipts registered for years in some of the former Central league towns. It is pointed out that $7,500 in cash in the club coffers at the very opening of the season ought to be a big bonus for the project.

CHAMPION SHOWS HOW SKATING BEGINNER SHOULD USE ARMS AND BODY AS AID IN GLIDING; ALSO IMPROPER USE.

(By Ben Oelckly, United States Amateur Skating Champion).

Beginners should make good use of their arms in skating. Some having seen experts skate with their arms behind them, are inclined to try that style. Speed skaters use that style only to rest. Speed skaters use their arms almost as much as their feet and beginners should go almost to the same extent. The arms should be used to make the body sway because the swaying of the body makes each stroke easier.

Each time you make a stroke let the arms and body go with the skating leg. The leg should be slightly bent at the knee, then straightened at the finish of the stroke. Do a dip on each stroke. Continual dipping and swinging of the body makes it possible to glide smoothly and gracefully and without enforced effort.

Skating should be a sort of rock back and forth with a dip in each rock, the knees being used as hinges for the dip.

AT KEITH PALACE

A WORLD'S FAIR ACT

Hawaiian Dancers from Coast Exposition at New Palace.

One of the most talked of attractions at the Panama-Pacific exposition were the Hawaiian dancers, the Hula-Hula girls, whose native dances, songs and whose playing on their national string instruments, advertised the fair in places where Art Smith was never heard of. will be one of the group of star attractions on the new bill at the New Palace. Toots Paka is touring the country with these girls and Hawaiian boys and the act has been hailed with delight in all the cities it has appeared in since leaving the exposition.

Little Nap, the chimpanzee with human intelligence, is performing a multitude of surprising tricks, while Harry Von Fosson will knock the spots out of Old Man Grump with his fun weapons. Mae Curtis, a girl with a personality, will relate several of her experiences, real and fancied, the real ones quite amusing and interesting as the fancied ones.

May Aubrey and Estella Rich's novel and exclusive songs and dances include a brilliant Venetian study in black and white. In this number the scenes and the costumes are copied faithfully from those seen in Venice during fete days.

This bill will succeed the current one which closes this evening. On this program are Harry Ralph's fifty girl act, "The Haberdashery," Hildegarde Mason and George Murray in their comedy skit, "Getting His Goat"; Dr. Royal Raceford, the electrical wizard; the Duch Brothers in a royal bounding act; and the Big City Four, a quartet of male voices in some of the sweetest harmony you ever heard.

On Monday afternoon each woman attending the matinee will be presented with a handsome silver spoon, and on each succeeding Monday for twelve weeks, additional spoons of the same pattern will be given away, so that any woman may secure an entire set of these handsome table necessities.

AT THE TEMPLE.

CALL OF THE WOODS

It Will Succeed "Tess of the Storm Country," at Temple.

The thoroughly enthralling story, "The Call of the Woods," a story of the northwest as red blooded as Jack London's "Call of the Wild," will succeed the turbulent "Tess of the Storm Country," which closes this evening after a week of unusual success. The Temple Players have come into a wave of popularity that shows no signs of ebbing, but that instead of swelling in volume and quite properly so, for the various members of the troupe are becoming "home folks" to their Fort Wayne friends, entering as they are, on their twenty-third week here. Just how much Fort Wayne has taken these artists to her bosom may best be evidenced that the Tuesday afternoon tango reception finds the stage crowded to overflowing with well-wishers, either renewing previous acquaintance or availing themselves of the opportunity of meeting the players for the first time. One of these receptions will be given again Tuesday of next week.

The management is arranging a couple of interesting contests for the Temple Player fans. One will be a popularity contest for boys and girls. Ballots will be distributed at every performance and these may be filled out and deposited in boxes provided for the purpose. The girl receiving the largest vote will be given a huge French doll, one that can say Mamma and Papa and close its eyes and other tricks, while to the successful boy will be presented a splendid coaster sled, one of the kind that can be steered and everything. This contest will be conducted Christmas week. Another will be one by which coupons clipped from the daily papers, accompanied by thirty cents, will entitle both a man and a woman to thirty-cent seats.

Little Miss Helen Long, who sang "Tennessee" as one of the numbers in the second amateur contest at the Temple last night, picked off first prize with the entire house voting for her. This sprightly miss put her song over like a professional. Second prize went to Arthur Mohr, who did some clever imitations of birds and animals. Miss Amelia Bashara ranked third in the affections of the house, her singing registering big. Other numbers on the amateur program were the Misses Cox and Wallace in a singing skit; Little Bluff Esterline, a song; L. B. Ward, a song, and Sid Brown, character song and topical poem, and an act entitled "The Outlaws" and done in true western fashion by five local youths. Each was, of course, awarded a prize.

AT THE EMPRESS

Filled to the brim with the romance and glamour of the golden west, "The Road Agent" comes to the Empress theater next week for a week's run. This is the splendid drama in which Dustin Farnum achieved his first fame. It was the biggest success which the famous actor and screen star has ever had and during its run at the Empress Farnum's part will be played by the popular Melvyn Gates.

Friends of the Empress stock are awaiting the initial presentation of this play with intense expectation, as it is expected to be the best of the many successes registered by this splendid organization. All the Empress stars will be seen in the drama. Miss Helen Gleason will have a part in which she will make many new friends while Walter Poulter, Harry Manners, Miss Lovelace and the others will also have parts particularly fitted to their abilities.

Scenically "The Road Agent" will be a delight. The Empress scenic artist, John Jacobs, has done himself proud in the preparation of the scenery and sets for this production.

Tonight the final performance of "Seven Days" will be given at the Empress. This great comedy has registered a most emphatic hit at the Empress and no one who enjoys a fun play should miss it.

THE PERFDY OF WOMAN.

Well Illustrated in Powerful Film Drama at Orpheum.

The adage and truth that "woman is fickle" was never so well illustrated as in "The Unfaithful Wife," the powerful photodramatic success which is starring Robert B. Mantell and Genevieve Hamper at the Orpheum theater today. The story tells in striking manner of the amour between a young Italian artist and the wonderfully beautiful Countess Roman, who spurns the love of her elderly husband for the caresses of the fascinating painter. The intensity of their passion for each other leads them to resort to terrible measures in order to rig themselves of the count, but in this plan they are frustrated for the count returns to life in a vault in which the guilty lovers had buried him, and returning as if from the dead, wreak a terrible vengeance upon the sinning couple.

Monday brings "A Little Brother of the Rich" and the initial installment of "Graft," and Tuesday William Faversham in "One Million Dollars."

AT THE JEFFERSON.

"THE END OF THE ROAD"

Harold Lockwood and May Allison at the Jefferson.

A very entertaining and well balanced bill is offered at the Jefferson today. The last chapter of "Neal of the Navy" and a Helene and Louis comedy, with the Mutual masterpiece, "The End of the Road," comprises an excellent program. Harold Lockwood and May Allison are the co-stars in "The End of the Road," a story laid in the Carolina mountains, where glimpses of the life of the mountaineers is vividly depicted. Among the thrills is a raid on a mountain "still" and the capture of a band of counterfeiters. No more spectacular scene has ever been screened than that depicting the raid by government officers of the mountain still. In this play every inch is a thrill. All the elements of romance and excitement which fill the pages of the early history of the Carolinas color the play.

WARNS MAYOR MUNCIE MUST BE CLEANED UP

Gov. Ralston May Take a Hand as Impeachment Suit is Filed.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 11.—Governor Samuel M. Ralston last night served notice on Mayor Rollin H. Bunch, of Muncie, Ind., that lawless conditions that are said to exist in that city must be corrected at once. The governor intimated to Mayor Bunch's attorney, John McPhee, that unless the Muncie authorities "clamp down the lid" immediately he will resort to every means at his command to cause an enforcement of the laws.

It became known here last night that Thomas P. Patterson, a Muncie attorney, who instituted an impeachment suit against Mayor Bunch, in the Delaware county courts, visited Governor Ralston Thursday and asked that Attorney General Stotsenberg be directed to assist in the prosecution of cases growing out of law enforcement campaign.

The governor said last night that he will not decide whether he will ask the attorney general to assist in the cases until he obtains more information. Mr. Patterson is to give Governor Ralston further information some time next week.

IMPEACHMENT STARTED.

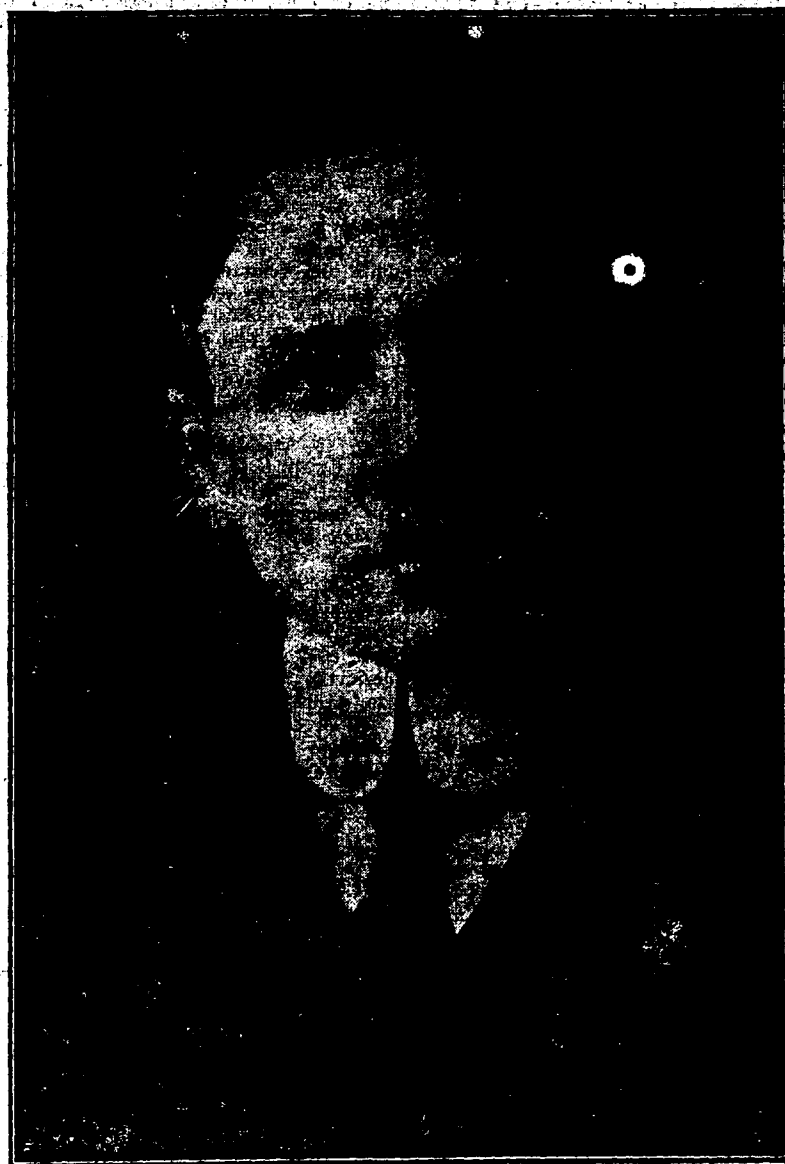

Muncie, Ind., Dec. 11.—An impeachment proceeding to remove Mayor Rollin H. Bunch from office was instituted here late yesterday in the circuit court by Thomas P. Patterson, an attorney, who recently came to Muncie. The complaint, brought under a civil statute, charges the mayor with failure to enforce the laws regarding liquor violations and gambling and of having, through agents, collected money from the operators of these places. Patterson refused to state what interests he represented, excepting to say that the Civic league, which was active last spring in securing graft indictments against the mayor and other city officials, had nothing to do with the suit.

Bittler, Robert Millard, C. P. Milliken, Clinton R. Willson and E. C. Miller. The incorporators are very enthusiastic and they expect a big business in the manufacture of this new style of shingle. It is absolutely fireproof and indestructible, pretty and not expensive, they say.

THIEF ESCAPES WITH $50,000 RARE JEWELS

Chicago, Dec. 11.—Eldred three watchmen guarding the building, a thief gained entrance to the Art Institute of Chicago on Michigan boulevard, early today, and escaped with a collection of rare jewels valued at between $35,000 and $50,000.

The collection was the gift of Laverne W. Noyes, a Chicago manufacturer, in memory of his late wife. It was made up

SAYS "SOUL KISS" LASTED TWO HOURS

New York Man Tells Court of Amazing Osculatory Performance.

New York, Dec. 11.—"Soul kisses" that lasted for more than two hours were described by Everett P. Ketchum before Supreme Court Justice Blanchard in testifying in the suit for separation brought against him by Mrs. Ada Brown Ketchum on the ground of cruelty.

Ketchum told how, when he was first introduced to his wife, she was described to him as "a girl who had never been kissed before in her life."

"She said," he testified, "that a kiss was such a sacred thing that she had saved it all her life for the man whom she was going to marry. I thought it a very beautiful idea."

Ketchum said he proposed exactly five days after they had been first introduced.

"Tell us about that first kiss she gave you, Mr. Ketchum?"

"Well," said the lawyer, "it was like this. We were seated on the sofa in the parlor. She put her arms around my neck and drew me to her and said: 'Everett, darling, this is what they call a soul kiss. This is because of my extraordinary love for you. I never knew before that a kiss lasted so long. I don't know how the ability to kiss came to me, but—'

"She leaned into my arms. Her lips met mine. She grabbed me. I tried to take my head away because I could not breathe, but—"

"How long did that kiss last?" asked Mr. Levy.

"Two hours," was the reply. "I could not get away."

YEAR IN SANITARIUM AS LAW SOUGHT HIM

Man Wanted for Robbery at Toledo, Arrested When Near Death.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—A victim of tuberculosis, Charles Green, of Toledo, Ohio, whose criminal record the police say is international, is under arrest here today, awaiting return to Cleveland, where he is wanted for having forfeited his bond of $24,000 last spring after his arrest on a charge of robbing jewelry firms of some valued at $17,000.

Notwithstanding that the police of a score of cities and private detective agencies have sought him, Green told the police after his arrest here yesterday that he has spent the last year in a Chicago sanitarium. Physicians say he will not live more than a month.

In 1907 Green was arrested in London for the theft of $38,000 worth of diamonds from a jeweler. He took passage on a liner and was located by wireless and arrested at sea. The gems were found behind a loose panel in Green's state room. He served five years in prison for the theft. Green is alleged to have robbed jewelers throughout the country by substituting imitation gems for originals.

MUST ACT QUICKLY.

No Time is to Be Lost if Calhoun Street is to Be Decorated.

Unless the merchants along Calhoun street from the Nickel Plate tracks to the Pennsylvania tracks take action within the next two days the effort that is being made to decorate the thoroughfare will be abandoned. The merchants must act quickly as the time is getting short.

Those desiring an idea as to how the street will look after being decorated are requested by Fred D. C. Wahrenburg, one of the originators of the plan, to take notice of the beautiful decorations in front of the Ruride store. While the other decorations may not be so elaborate a general idea may be had of the effect. The plan is to have Fort Wayne's principal business street beautifully decorated during the holiday season.

CHARGES AGAINST OFFICER BLOW UP

Patrolman Johnson Fully Cleared by Board's Inquiry.

The case against Patrolman Glenn Johnson, accused of having stolen admission tickets from the Orpheum theater blew itself into the complete nothingness of a burst soap bubble at the hearing before the board of safety, Friday night. As he said he would do, Officer Johnson established his innocence.

There was nothing developed during the hearing that would support an accusation that other officers of the police department had tried to "job" Patrolman Johnson out of his position on the force. Chief of Police Charles Lenz, Saturday morning, stated that so far as he was concerned the affair was at an end. He says that Officer Johnson has been completely exonerated, an opinion that is fully shared by the members of the board of safety. Mayor Hoesy and all others who heard the testimony given at the hearing, and that the incident is closed.

How the Story Was Started.

The affair, which seemed for a time to threaten the police department with another scandal and Patrolman Johnson with disgrace, grew out of a silly fib told by Officer Johnson's 15-year-old daughter, Jeanette, when she presented some stolen tickets for admission at the Orpheum and out of Manager A. L. Brentlinger's first statement to Chief Lenz and to newspaper men that these tickets were found by him to have been removed from unused seats of tickets stored in an upper room of the theater building. It was proved by the tickets themselves and by Manager Brentlinger's testimony at the hearing that all the tickets in possession of Miss Johnson had been previously used.

Miss Johnson testified that these tickets were given to her on Calhoun street by Earl Long, on Saturday evening, November 27, and that the same evening she offered three of them for the admission of herself and two girl friends who had met to the Orpheum. When the tickets were found to be for another date than that upon which they were presented she was questioned by Manager Brentlinger, to whom she related the story that they had been given her by her father, who had told her, she stated, they had been given to him by the manager of the theater. Miss Johnson told the board that Long met her in front of the Lyric theater and gave her twenty-eight tickets, saying they had been given to him by Officer Johnson. She said she told the manager at the theater that her father had given them to her because she thought it would "sound better."

Johnson Never Had a Key.

Manager Brentlinger said he had two keys to the theater made last May and gave one to Patrolman John Godfrey and one to another officer. He could not say who the officer was, but had supposed it was Johnson. It was shown that Johnson was not reappointed to the force until May 29 and did not go on duty until May 31 as well as that he had not been assigned to the beat opposite the Orpheum until July 24. Officer Johnson had all along denied that he ever had a key to the theater and the testimony established the soundness of his denial. A story in circulation for several days that Johnson had secretly returned the alleged key to the janitor of the theater was exploded by the testimony of that witness, who declared to the board that nothing of the sort took place.

Long Confessed the Theft.

George Carmer, foreman in the plant of the American Road Machine company, related that Earl Long, a 17-year-old youth who has been in the reform school, had stolen money from his (Carmer's) coat in the corner's office and fled from the city. By a ruse Carmer got him back and then in Carmer's presence Officer Johnson taxed him about the tickets and Long in the presence of the officer and Carmer confessed to the theft of the tickets from the theater. Johnson has since made every effort to locate Long and get him back, but without success.

After the testimony had been taken the board took the case under advisement and soon returned a finding exonerating Officer Johnson, who had a short time before been told to return to his duty.

WELSH HELD TO DRAW.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 11. -- Freda Welsh, lightweight champion, and Bennie Palmer, Mexican, fought eight rounds to a "no decision" here last night. It was the opinion of a few that the Mexican forced the fighting enough and landed enough clean hard blows to the body to have earned a draw.

Welsh did not exert himself with the exception of a few spurts in the clinches, where he used short rights and lefts frequently.

Palmer had a shade in the first round when he started slugging and landed several hard body blows. Welsh made his best showing in the fourth. The other rounds saw much clinching and wars about even.

Unmasking the Underworld

To the people of the upper world as well as to the majority of the underworld comparatively little is known of the activities and income of the "heel worker" or "damper getter." Years ago he was called a "till tapper" and the tool was generally a daring small boy, working under the instruction of a "Pagin" who sent him into shops to crawl unnoticed behind the counters to steal from the money drawers whatever of silver or bills there.

But that was before the advent of the "music box" (cash register) took the graft out of boys' line of work into a proposition demanding considerable brains to plan and ability to execute store robberies with minimum risk and maximum profit. It has developed into a regular occupation with many hands of two, three and four members known as heel mobs.

BUSY AT THEIR TRADE.

Although some of these "mobs" stay in one city permanently, the higher class of damper getters work about a month in Chicago, a month in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, shorter periods in smaller cities, always going and coming, plying their trade every day, all day long, everywhere. They become known as heel men to the police of any one city only when one of their number "drops for a fall." The rare times I have heard of a first-class heel man going to prison were on account of failure to save sufficient "fall money" out of the earnings of a mob, money with which to hire a clever "mouthpiece" (lawyer) or bribe the cops.

Tom, Jerry, Harry and Dick form a "mob out on the heel." Tom is middle-aged, ruddy, in dress and appearance a prosperous stock broker. Jerry is younger, an athletic, vigorous young bank clerk to the casual glance. Harry is past 50, with hair almost white and would pass for that well known taxpayer, "pro bono publico." Dick, of uncertain age, can assume with equal ease the role of meter inspector or police inspector.

LAYING OUT THE DAY'S WORK.

They meet by appointment at their favorite cafe at 7 a. m., have a cocktail as they read the papers and map out the morning's work, which starts at 8 a. m. sharp. Selecting eight square blocks in the busiest section of town, each is given two blocks to cover in the following manner:

Tom goes to his allotted station, where every building contains one or more stores. He enters each one in turn to note how business is carried on—where the registers are located, their particular model, how easily accessible, how near an opening in the counter they are placed, whether a cashier is employed or if the salespeople operate the music boxes. Also where conditions seem favorable he makes a "buy" in order to see if the register contains many big bills.

Emerging from the store that he thinks a good robbery prospect, he writes down its name, address and enough data to furnish a useful report to the mob, in this way the eight blocks are canvassed by the industrious four. At noon they gather to submit for the consideration of Jerry, the master mind of the band, the result of their observations.

JERRY MAKES THE DECISION.

By careful process of elimination Jerry reduces these prospects in number to about a half-dozen stores, and upon him rests the final decision as to which places shall be robbed. That afternoon he visits some of the stores on the revised list, selects the one which seems the best venture for his men and perfects his plan of future action there. The next day Jerry devotes to the others on the list, while the other three continue in their "findings."

At the end of a week they have thoroughly covered a large district and Jerry has a number of stores picked out for robbery, the details for each one thoroughly worked out and decided upon. Jerry is the tool or actual money getter, the others are his stalls, and although he is open to suggestions from the stalls they must finally be governed by his instructions, because he runs the risk of losing his liberty; he alone "takes a chance."

The first store they rob is, we will say, a busy hardware retail establishment having several different departments, each department having its own special clerk and cash register. This particular place has a rush hour in which it is hard to be waited on. The music box where the steel drills, etc., are sold is the objective of our friends. During the rush hour Tom goes there and has the salesman wrap up for a $2 twist drill, and then takes the clerk back to the manager's office to get figures on the installation of a steam heating plant in his castle in Spain, a twenty-room house.

By this time Harry (pro bono publico) is at the next counter to the rear making a stall purchase. Dick, standing in the aisle, signals, by taking his hat off, to Jerry on the sidewalk just as Tom goes away from the drill counter with the salesman. Jerry, bareheaded, in his shirt sleeves, walks in rapidly with a bushy air and goes directly to the cash register behind the counter. The moment he reaches the music box Harry drops $10 in silver quarters on the floor, attracting general attention to himself as he nervously starts to gather up the scattered coins, while Jerry calmly empties the register and walks out of the store.

CALMLY CONTINUE ROBBERING.

In a few minutes the four are together again, with Jerry giving final instructions to his stalls regarding the next place he has chosen to rob. Back in the hardware store the loss may not be discovered for half an hour or more, and often the salesman is not only suspected of the theft but is lucky if he escapes imprisonment for the heel job he knows nothing about.

I myself with two stalls have taken three such music boxes inside of an hour.

But this graft is not by any means confined to music boxes. As a rule the biggest money on the heel is stolen from saloons. Nearly every cafe has besides the register a damper or money drawer located in the back bar, wherein are kept varying sums under lock and key during business hours and in the safe at night. Out of his damper the proprietor may pay his landlord the rent, the brewery collector for the beer, and here, too, is kept the cash for the accommodation of well-known customers who desire to have checks cashed.

In one of our large cities is a saloon run by a big German who does considerable business. Jake, the boss, pays all his bills in currency out of a cigar box he keeps in a damper while he is behind the bar, and when he goes upstairs he takes it with him.

Several heel mobs had exhausted their ingenuity in vain attempts to get Jake to leave this damper unprotected for a few minutes during the hour when his two bartenders were upstairs eating dinner and he alone in the bar. But whether it was because Jake could not be stalled on account of a suspicious nature or just his stolid laziness they failed to accomplish their purpose.

OUT FOR BIG GAME.

Finally two heel men formed a plan and waited until the first of the month, when they were reasonably sure, if successful, to get a month's rent, beer bill and the check money. On the afternoon of the first day of the month Jake was leaning his enormous frame against the back bar, talking to two German friends who stood drinking beer before him. A well-dressed stranger came in, ordered a beer, accidentally spilled some of it on his hands, asked Jake where he could wash them, and was directed to the washroom in the rear.

Shortly after the stranger went to wash his hands Jake's attention was drawn to the front window by the sight of a man in overalls ascending a ladder with a saw in his hand.

"Hey, Shultz go out and see vot dot fella is doin' mit my house," said Jake.

Shultz went out and came back to the door, calling excitedly, "Come here once, Jake. Dot's a fella wat's got a order from the mayor to take away from over your place the beer sign."

With a loud bellow of protest Jake and his friends hurried to the foot of the ladder upon which the workman was coolly starting to saw through an ornamental gilt goot.

"Hey you, what the heilndemntion you doin' by me here vat you do?"

"Who are you?" asked the worce. "I'm der boss."

"Not my boss," calmly said the man on the ladder as he turned to the sign again.

This so exasperated the German that he commenced shaking the ladder violently and the man came down, threw the saw on the ground and went away, vowing to have Jake arrested for interfering with the mayor's orders as soon as he could find a cop.

$1,100 FOR A SAW.

Jake carried the ladder and saw into the store to await the arrival of the policeman. But long before any officer came Jake discovered that some one had pried open the damper with a "James" (Jimmy) and stolen over $1,100. The saw now hangs over the bar as a souvenir of one of Jake's most unlucky days.

After Jerry's mob has cleaned up the main business section of town

the owner. This plant may vary from $50 to $500, seldom less than the former and sometimes greater than the latter. The mob meets much earlier now about 6 a. m., in the neighborhood chosen, and each man again has an area to cover and a report to make.

LOCATING HIDDEN MONEY.

Tom visits several groceries, asking for change for $10 before he sees a likely opening. Here he buys of a woman alone in the store a quarter's worth and gives a $5 bill in payment. The woman goes back into the living-room and as Tom hears a drawer being pulled out he steps to the doorway and politely offers a $1 bill instead of the other, saying "didn't know I had it," as he sees where the plant is kept.

In this manner one pretext or another serves to locate the plant and note is taken of essential details. The reports are reviewed, passed upon and where necessary further perfected by other visits to the prospect. Once the plant, representing hoarded savings or funds with which to pay bills, is found there remains the reckoning as to which of the many ways of luring the unsuspecting victim out of sight and hearing while Jerry sneaks in and takes it. Dick, for instance, may impersonate a health, gas or water inspector during the slackest hour of the day and bring the shopkeeper to either back yard, cellar or even roof of the building and be well away before the theft is found out.

These are the methods of heel workers. The man who follows this line of graft is perhaps as well off as any other underworld grafter, but if superficial reading of his activities seems to argue that he is a well-paid, well-chosen trade it is greatly misleading.

Jerry, for instance, never knows how long Tom, Dick or Harry is go-

How Much Is In Your Neighbor's Pay Envelope?

Do you earn more than $1,000 a year?

If so, you are better off than fifty-nine out of every sixty persons in the United States.

Statistics compiled show that the average yearly income of persons employed in the principal industrial states of the Union range from $501 to $510.

Dr. Frank H. Streightoff, an authority on economics, places the minimum family income adequate to the maintenance of normal living conditions in the smaller cities of the north, according to the general prevailing American notion of decent living, at $650. Accordingly, unless more than one member of each family contributes to the household expenses the income is $150 a year less than adequate.

Estimates compiled show that not more than one person in every twenty-five engaged in gainful occupations in the United States earns over $1,000 a year. The latest census returns show that only 40 per cent of the population is so employed. From this the deduction is made that not more than one person in every sixty men, women and children in the United States earns $1,000 a year or more.

While the federal government has never made a survey of the earnings of the entire population, statistics have been compiled on certain industries. The last table made on the earnings of railroad employees shows that only seven men in every 100 earned as much as $1,000 a year. Earnings of male employees under 21 years of age were not considered. Neither were the earnings of female employees. If there are but seven adult male employees in every 100 making over $1,000 a year statisticians here are confident that not more than four employed persons in every 100 are making over $1,000 when the low salaries of female employees and minor males is figured in the average.

With one of every twenty-five persons in the country making $1,000 a year or more, there are in the United States approximately 1,500,000 with incomes of more than $1,000 a year. The last census showed 38,167,366 persons engaged in gainful occupations. The total population at that time was 91,972,266, and the number of persons 10 years of age or over was 71,580,270. Fifty-three per cent, or a little more than half, of all the Saloons and criminals are so closely associated it is impossible to think long of one without the other. In the course of my life I have become well acquainted in hundreds of saloons, ranging from sailors' haunts to the rendezvous of respected citizens, and without exception I have found the most regular customers are the men who follow crime for a living.

persons in the United States over 10 years of age were engaged in gainful occupations.

They were engaged as follows:
Agriculture 12,659,203
Extraction of minerals 964,824
Manufacturing and mechanical industries 10,658,381
Transportation 2,637,631
Professional service 1,663,569
Domestic and personal service 3,772,174
Miscellaneous occupations, 1,737,053

According to the estimates made as to the number of persons in the United States making in excess of $1,000 a year and the returns made to the treasury department on the income tax statements, there are in this country 1,169,097 persons who have incomes of more than $1,000 but less than $3,000.

That there is widespread misconception as to the number of persons having even moderate incomes was proven by the returns made as a result of the passage of the income tax law. When the law was being considered by Congress estimates were made to the committee that at least 425,000 persons in the United States had incomes of more than $3,000 per annum. The returns showed but 357,598.

When the law was passed it was believed that over 100 persons in the United States had incomes of more than $1,500,000 a year. The returns showed only forty-four to be getting more than $1,000,000. Similar reductions were made in all classes.

The first report made by the treasury department showed the number of returns made on the income tax to be as follows:

In some industries of the United States the number of employees receiving $6 and $7 a week is twenty times as great as the number receiving $50 a week. In the cotton industry in New Jersey there were 1,007 employees at $6 and $7 a week to forty-nine at $25. A survey made in New Jersey in 1908 showed the average annual wage in 2,127 establishments in that state to be $500.14. The number of persons employed in that number of establishments was 278,964.

Professor Nearing, who has devoted considerable study to the question of incomes in the United States, is said by Dr. Streightoff to have reached the conclusion that "not more than one adult male wage-earner in every twenty employed in the industries of Massachusetts received in annual earnings for a normally prosperous year more than $1,000. On the other hand, more than one-third of all the adult males are paid wages under $500; more than one-half receive wages under $600; while nearly three-fourths receive less than $700 annually."

In dealing with statistics on railroads Professor Nearing concluded that "in 1909 51 per cent of the million and a half railroad employees in the United States received less than $625 a year; that 93 per cent received less than $1,900 a year, leaving 7 per cent who earned more than $1,000."

Dr. Spahr's estimates show that he has figured 200,000 persons in the United States make $5,000 a year or over, 1,300,000 make from $1,200 to $5,000 and 11,000,000 get less than $1,200 a year.

Nobody Got Licked.

There are a lot of four-flushers who go through life without learning that four-flushing is a fine art. Such are beneath contempt. But one has great admiration for those few who have mastered the game.

"If a man called me a liar," asserted one of such, "I'd sail in and lick him if he weighed 300 pounds."

"Well, you big bluff," answered one who was tired of listening, "call you, right here and now. You're a liar."

"Bluff yourself," came back the artist, without a minute's hesitation. "You don't weigh more than 150 and you know what I said."

BREF EDDYTORIUL ON SNOW

There aint much room for a very long eddytorial in this issue of the Bugle, and for this reason this eddytorial which we be a goin to dash off wont be long but itll be as strong as we can make it consider its length and heres the subjeckt we be a going to write about: "SNOW IN BINGVILLE"

Sinst winter set in in this vicinity along in November it has snew & snew. In other words there has been jest one snow fall after another, and as a result the snow is now betwixt 3 & 4 ft. deep on the level in town and in some places 8 or 9 ft. deep where its drifted. Well, what has happend, we ask?

Why here is what has happend: The snow is jest simply layin where it fell, and when a person goes outen the house how can they expect to navvygate with the snow 8 to 4 ft. deep?

Its a burnin disgrase & a sin & a shame how folks has permitted the snow whitch has fell to lay on their side walks so that them as has to go out and about on bizness has to flounder through same until they be exosted.

Not only that, but what has our road soopersvisers did about breakin even the Main st. of Bingville with the town snow plow made & pervided for that purpose? Answer—they aint did nothink. On the other hand our road soopersvisers set by the stove in Hen Weathersbys store and smokes and plays checkers and talks, whilst teams sticks in the snow in our street and has to be dug out with shuvvles.

We hope we wont haft to speak about this matter agin, but if we do we will say somethink in the columns of the Bugle that we kalkilate will wake up our road soopersvisers to a sense of their responsibility even if we haft to rake and scrape through their pasts in order to dig up some scandals in their pasts whitch they wouldnt care to see in print.

THIS AINT WHAT YOU MIGHT CALL A THREAT—ITS A PROMISE!

A Hasty Exit

Old Dad Henderson called at the residence of Lem Brown to see Lem on business thoder morning. Lem wasnt at home, but Dad said he'd just step in and wait till Lem got back.

Mrs. Brown gave him a chair by the fire, and Dad sat down. While Dad set there the snow and dirt melted off his boots whitch he didn't clean when he entered the house, and made a awful mess on Mrs. Browns nice clean floor. Mrs. Brown is awful neat and tidy about her house, and when she seen that Dad had soiled her floor so turrible she opened the door, grabbed up a broom and swept him right into the street, slamming the door behind him. Next time Dad calls at Mrs. Browns house we kalkilate he will clean his boots before he enters.

Awful Toothacke

Bill Hepburn, our artistick blacksmith had a awful toothacke one night last week. It was a jumping toothacke, and every time the tooth jumped he said he thort to goodness his head would fly off his shoulders.

He couldnt sleep a wink and along about 1 a. m. he got up and dressed and went to Doc Livermore who he woke up and asked Doc to pull the tooth outen his head as quick as he could get hold of it. Doc was nearly asleep and a good deal bewildered at that hour of the morning, but he got Bill into a chair and rammed a pair of forceps into his mouth, planting one foot into Bills stummick, leaned back and pulled and hauled until the tooth finally come out, when to Bills disgust he found that Doc had pulled the wrong tooth.

Doc said if at first you dont succeed try, try again, so he rammed the forceps back into Bills mouth and took hold of the tooth that was acking and strained back, and the forceps slipped off the tooth and Doc fell sprawling, striking his head a awful wallop on the corner of the bureau.

By this time Bill said he guessed his toothacke was better and that he would return home and go to bed, whitch he done in deep disgust. Bill says that between Doc pulling the wrong tooth the first time and the forceps slipping off the right tooth the second time, his mouth acked him so bad he couldn't tell whether he had a toothacke or not.

Ame thinks he got a little the best of Cy in the swop, being as the watch he got sometimes runs as long as an hour at a time, whereas the watch Ame traded to Cy wont go at all less you shake it, and then only for a minit or two. Neither watch is a very reliable suspiet as to the right time.

Hot for Homer

Homer Perkins took a hot soapstone to bed with him to warm his feet on last Tuesday night, whitch was one of the coldest nights we have had so far this winter. Homer had a towel rapped around the hot soapstone, but after he went to sleep he worked the towel off the soapstone with his feet, then he dreamt he had died and went to a hotter climate.

When Homer woke up and realized that his feet was on the hot soapstone, he says he jumped strait up outen bed and lit clean in the middle of the floor with one jump. One heel is so hot that Homer has to wear a piece on it.

Births

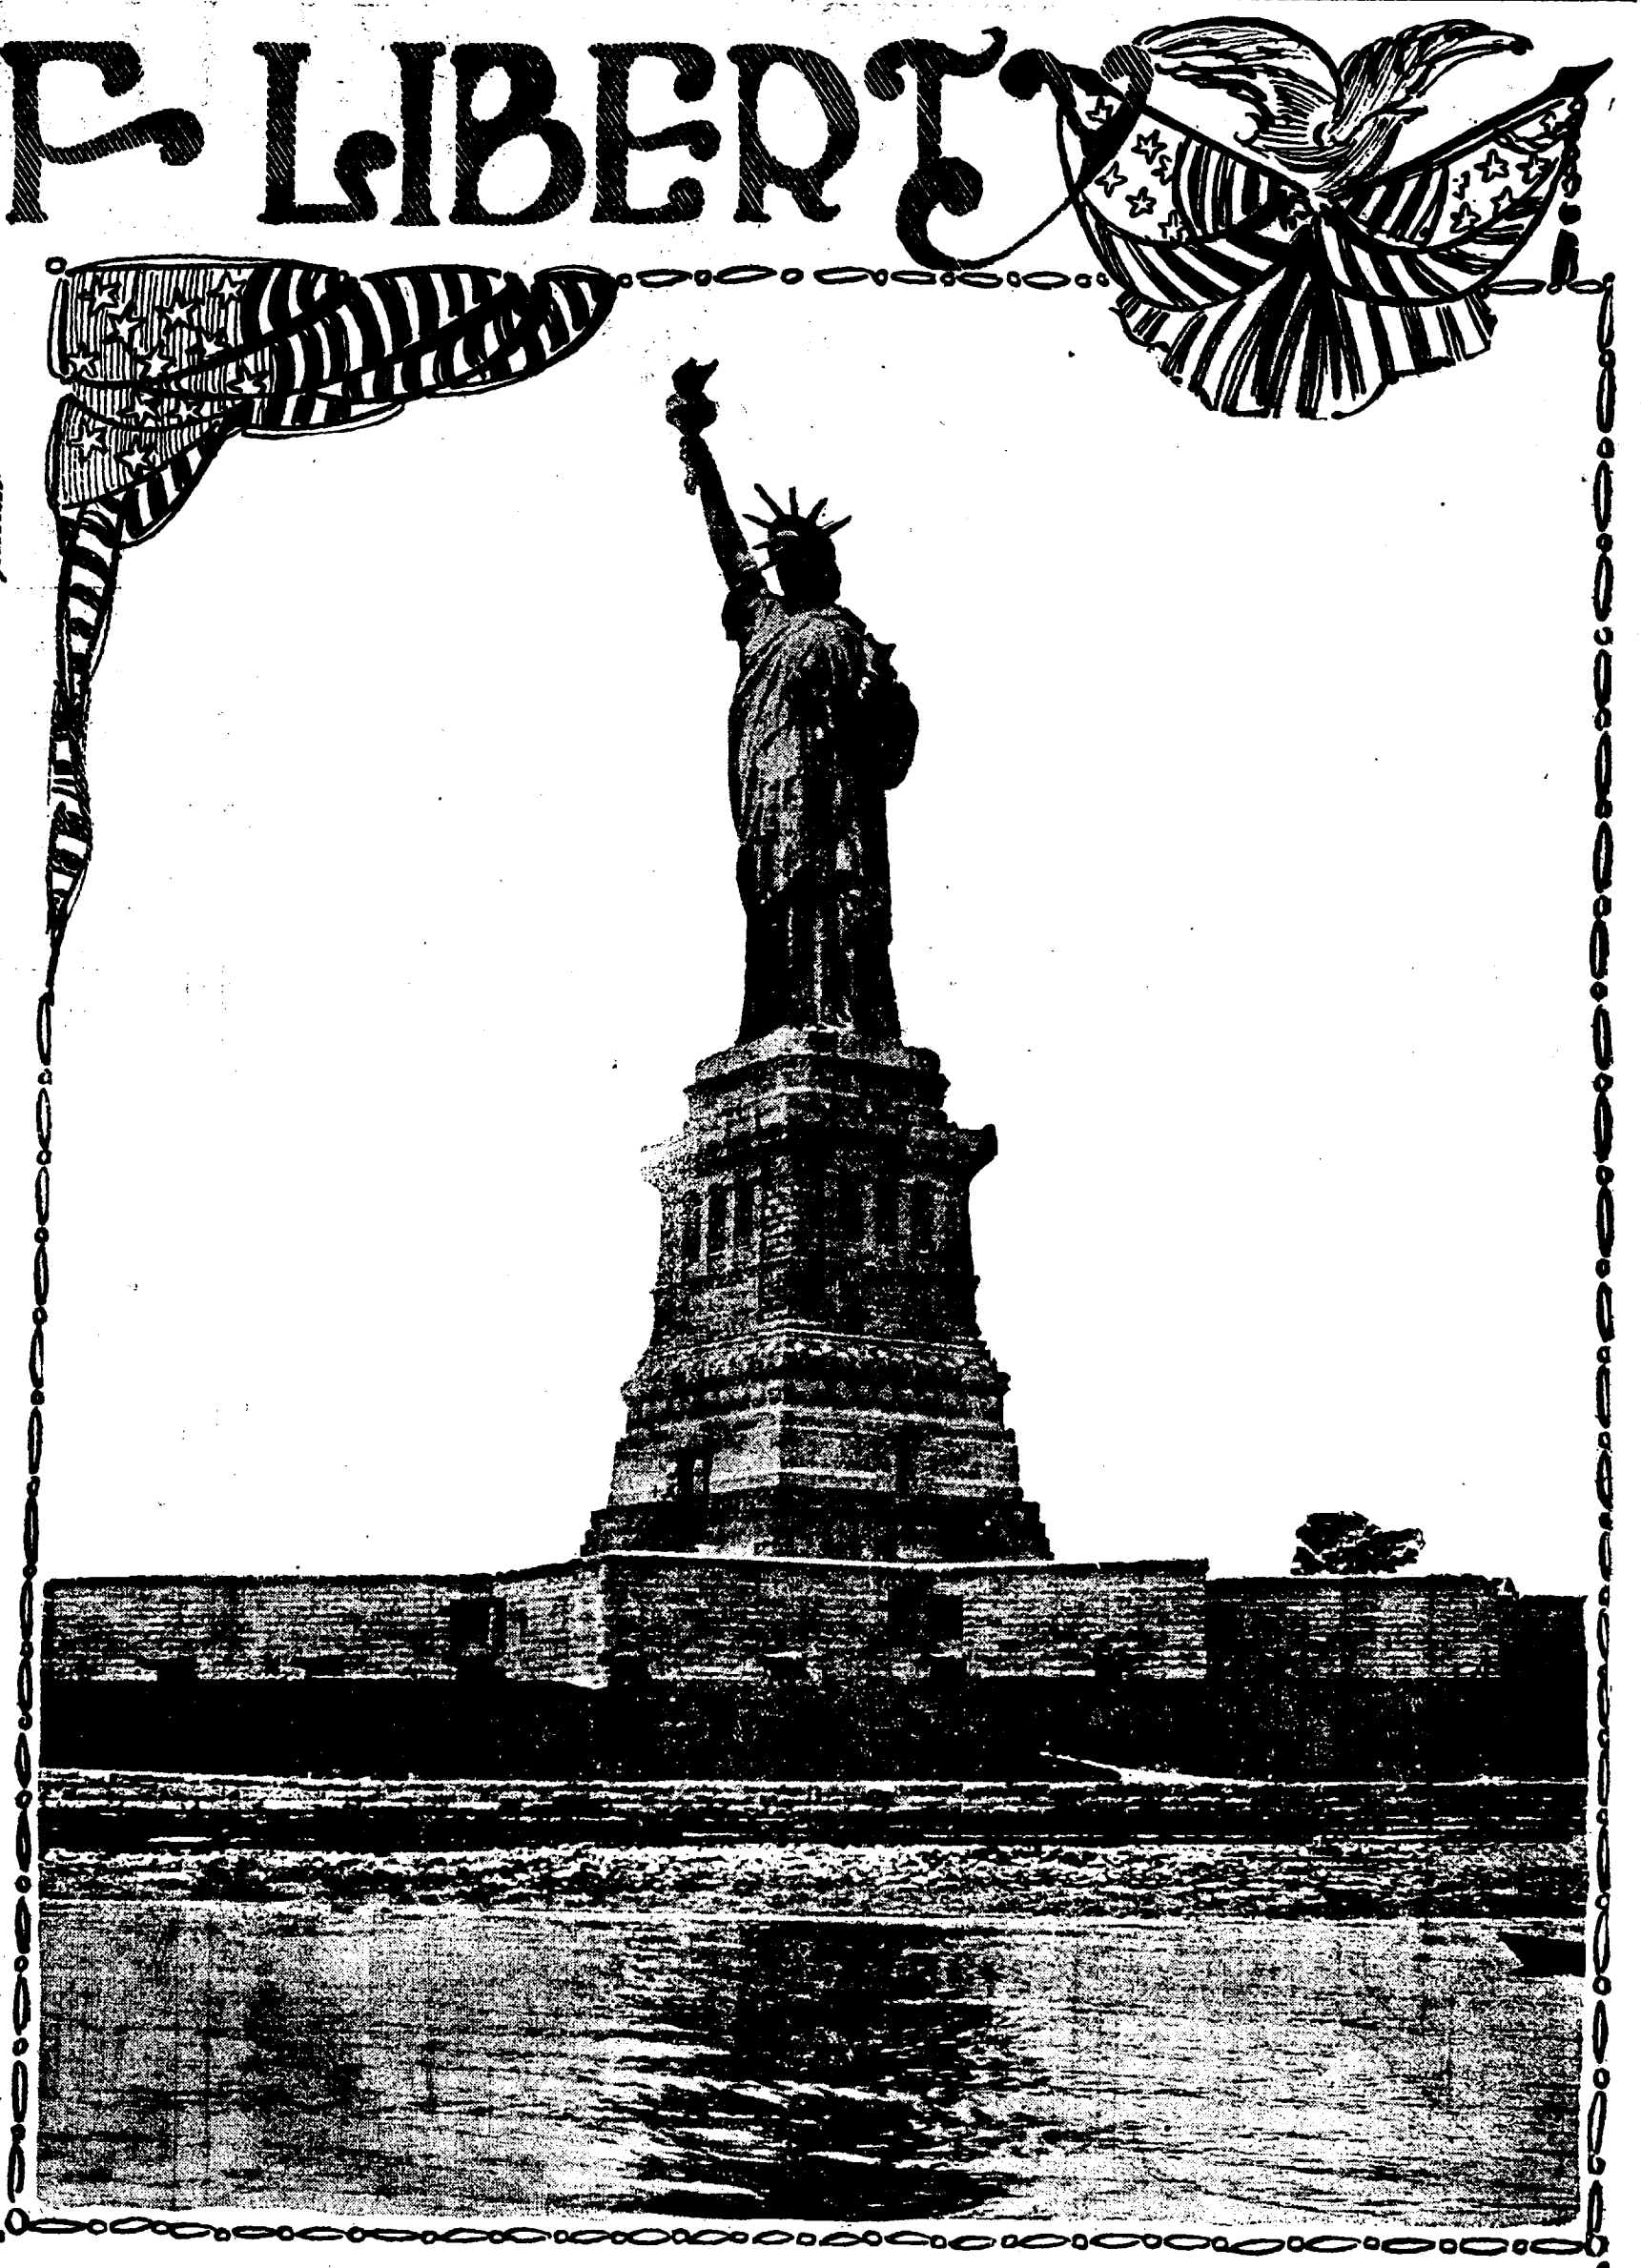

We regret not being able to report any births in Bingville or vicinity in this issue of the Bugle. We had hoped to be able to report at least one new arrival in this issue, together with its weight, sex and other important particulars, but the expected dont always happen, and we therefore ask you to be patient until next week or the week after, when we hope to be able to state definitely that one more has been added to the growing populasishion of Bingville.

SKATES Sharped

Being as business is dull I thought I might as well make a extra dollar or two sharpening skates for the boys whitch is why I insert this advertisement. The ice is good at present. Make the most of it, boys, while it lasts. Remember they wont be no ice on Snake Creek or Gootchic Pond next July. Skate while you can. What is the use trying to skate on dull skates when you can have me sharp them up keen as a razor for 3 cts. per pair. I will sharp you skates while you wait. I sharpened up a pair of skates for Lem Quigley last wk and they was so sharp that they slid out from under him and ilke to oi broke his fool neck. I will do the same to you. I don't know much about skating myself, being as I never had a skate on in my life, but I can sharp them for you all right. Give me a trial and be convinced.

STATUE OF LIBERTY BECKONS TO WAR-TORN PEOPLE OF EUROPE

STATUE OF LIBERTY IN NEW YORK HARBOR

With Close of Titanic Struggle Immigration Question Will Become Acute With Uncle Sam--Adequate Safeguards, However, Are to Keep Out Irresponsible Hordes--Officials Expect Experienced Farmers of Europe to Occupy Millions of Acres in the Open Lands of the United States

Be Free.
The thought of the world is waking out of a slumber deep and long
And the race is beginning to understand how Right can master Wrong
And the eyes of the world are opening wide and great are the truths they see;
And the heart of the world is singing a song, and its burden is "Be Free!"
Now the thought of the world and the wish of the world and the song of the world will make a force so strong that the fetters forged for a million years may break.
And the need of the world and the wish of the world and the song of the world I hear,
All through the clanging and clashing of bells, this wondrous time of the year;
And I hear the sound like the breaking of chains, and it seems to say to me,
"The voice of one who spoke of old, the truth shall make one free!"

The United States today is offering the freedom for which it fought against England in the revolutionary war and the freedom it has enjoyed ever since through the power of its arms, to the afflicted people of Europe, who have tired of a monarchy that destroys their peace, that curtails their liberties and limits their religious practice.

As the Pilgrims who came here from England found liberty in the new land so the immigrants arriving here today are finding solace from their long years of thralldom, political dictation and religious limitation that no other land ever has afforded them.

Berthold's statue of Liberty in New York harbor means more today than it ever has since it was erected.

Uncle Sam has stretched a friendly hand across the sea and has offered to lead his aid in lifting the burdens of those afflicted. The heart of the nation has opened to the oppressed as never before.

The United States, in this time of dire trouble, has been turned to by all nations as the one place where men may reside peacefully, where they shall not be subjected to military service, where there is no conscription, where people may enjoy the financial returns of their toil and where freedom is the one great essential--where men even breathe the freedom and rest assured that a beneficent government shall enforce everything rather than to yield that great principle whereby such a great nation was formed--a nation that resisted the great naval and military power of Great Britain to form a lasting government founded on those great principles that other nations have lacked--absence of monarchy, absence of political and religious dictation and finally the right of each man to enjoy his own possessions free and undisturbed.

TURNING TO UNCLE SAM.

At this present day the nations of Europe have turned to Uncle Sam for aid. They have appealed to him to free them from the subjugation of kings and other rulers and grant them that liberty that they so long have sought in the Old World in vain.

The United States offers the only safe harbor either during or after the war. It has met its immigrants at Ellis Island and given them a hearty welcome.

While immigration has been decreased since the war it is expected to reach its maximum after the war and it is predicted that this will not find the country flooded with foreigners who are too poor to finance themselves but with men and women who have forsaken their own countries in search of the solace and the freedom that the United States alone offers.

The United States immigrant rules are such that no foreigners who have not sufficient means of support will be admitted. The country wants sturdy men and women, who will settle on its great farm areas and develop the land. It wants men and women free of disease, persons who can read and write and above all men and women who in the future may prove an honor to the country that has adopted them.

The railroads of the United States are anxious to get hold of men and women who are good farmers. If these families have enough money to buy their farm instruments and to tide themselves over for the first year, the railroads will be glad to give them a long time in paying off on the land. As one immigration agent expressed it: The railroads would rather have a good farmer with $100 than an inexperienced farmer with $1,000 or $2,000.

RAILROADS CO-OPERATING.

The railroads are admittedly considering the proposition from the angle of gain. They want to place good farmers along their right of ways so that they may derive freight charges on the products shipped by these immigrant farmers. They make every effort, however, to place these men on the land most suitable for their ability.

Recently an Italian village of about 1,000 men has been established by a certain railway at Tonytown, Ark. All the men there are adept at raising grapes and have been placed in charge of extensive yards there. It is the object of the immigration departments of the various railroads to place these men in climates that are particularly suited to them and to choose for them the kind of soil to which they have been accustomed in their farming in the Old World.

The Italian immigrants will not consider locating any place but where a number of their fellow countrymen reside, and for this reason many of the railroads have formed colonies. In other such nations communities Swedes and Belgians have been located.

Because of the excessive gold in Canada and in the Dakotas, Montana and other northern states, including Minnesota, many Swedes and Norwegians have found homesteads and have made a success of farming.

The United States itself has about a million acres of land that it wishes practically to give to men and women who will develop it and through their own prosperity aid in the prosperity and financial development of the nation. The United States wants men and women who can work hard and make a living for themselves and will guard itself against the hordes that may sweep in this direction at the end of the war.

BELGIAN EXAMPLE.

Much has been said about the Belgians emigrating and coming to this country. Many of their orphans have been brought here and have found homes. The United States of America wishes to foster every man, woman and child who has not enjoyed liberty in his own country, but it intends to jealously guard its ports from men and women who come here impoverished. It is a rule of the customs officers and that department that none is to be admitted who cannot show sufficient funds to support him or her until such a time as they may become self-supporting.

Whether there will be a great influx of immigrants after the war is yet a matter of conjecture. Real estate dealers and the railroads realize it as a possibility, but they also realize that all governments will be short of expert workmen after the war and will do their utmost to prevent the emigration of their men after the war is settled.

Despite the willingness of Uncle Sam to give a home and employment to everyone suffering a desire for freedom, the governments of the Old World have effectively prevented emigration for many years before the war broke out and this is further proof that the entire conflict was planned long before it ever came to a climax and that every nation now engaged in it had been preparing for it.

The German nation always has sought in every manner possible to discourage emigration. The farmers themselves found their lands fertile and profitable in the confines of the former Prussian empire, but many of them fled the enforced military service. In this connection may be mentioned the three great editors--Daenzer, Schurz and Fretorius who founded great newspapers in the United States and made fortunes here.

None of them might be referred to as having fled military service in the Old World. The three might be mentioned rather as having sought freedom of speech in the United States.

THE KIND WANTED.

That it is the evident desire of many aliens to seek future fortune in the land of the free is evidenced by frequent attempts on the part of the subjects of other governments to make their way here. Recently a number of able-bodied men have sought to make the journey to America with the hope of escaping the conscription that they fear Great Britain finally will adopt.

But it is conceded that the nations of the Old World will in future prohibit their able-bodied men from coming to America.

Before the war certain American railroads sent representatives to Europe to solicit immigrants to the United States who would take up farms and develop the land. For at least a year before the war all of the nations now engaged prevented these farmers from departing.

Later the steamship agents, who make their salaries and commissions by inducing trans-Atlantic traveling, took up the matter of immigration to the United States. When the present war hovered with definite certainty over the Old World even the steamship agents were barred from soliciting immigrants to the United States.

While before the war there were approximately 4,000,000 men, women and children coming to the United States to seek freedom under the Stars and Stripes, the present income is placed at about 100,000

Those arriving are all sturdy farmers. Some of them have families of 17 children and could easily handle from 400 to 1,000 acres and make the soil produce ample returns.

The children are educated from birth in the art of farming and eventually branch out for themselves as successful agriculturists. In this regard they are more valuable than ever for they never consider life in the city.

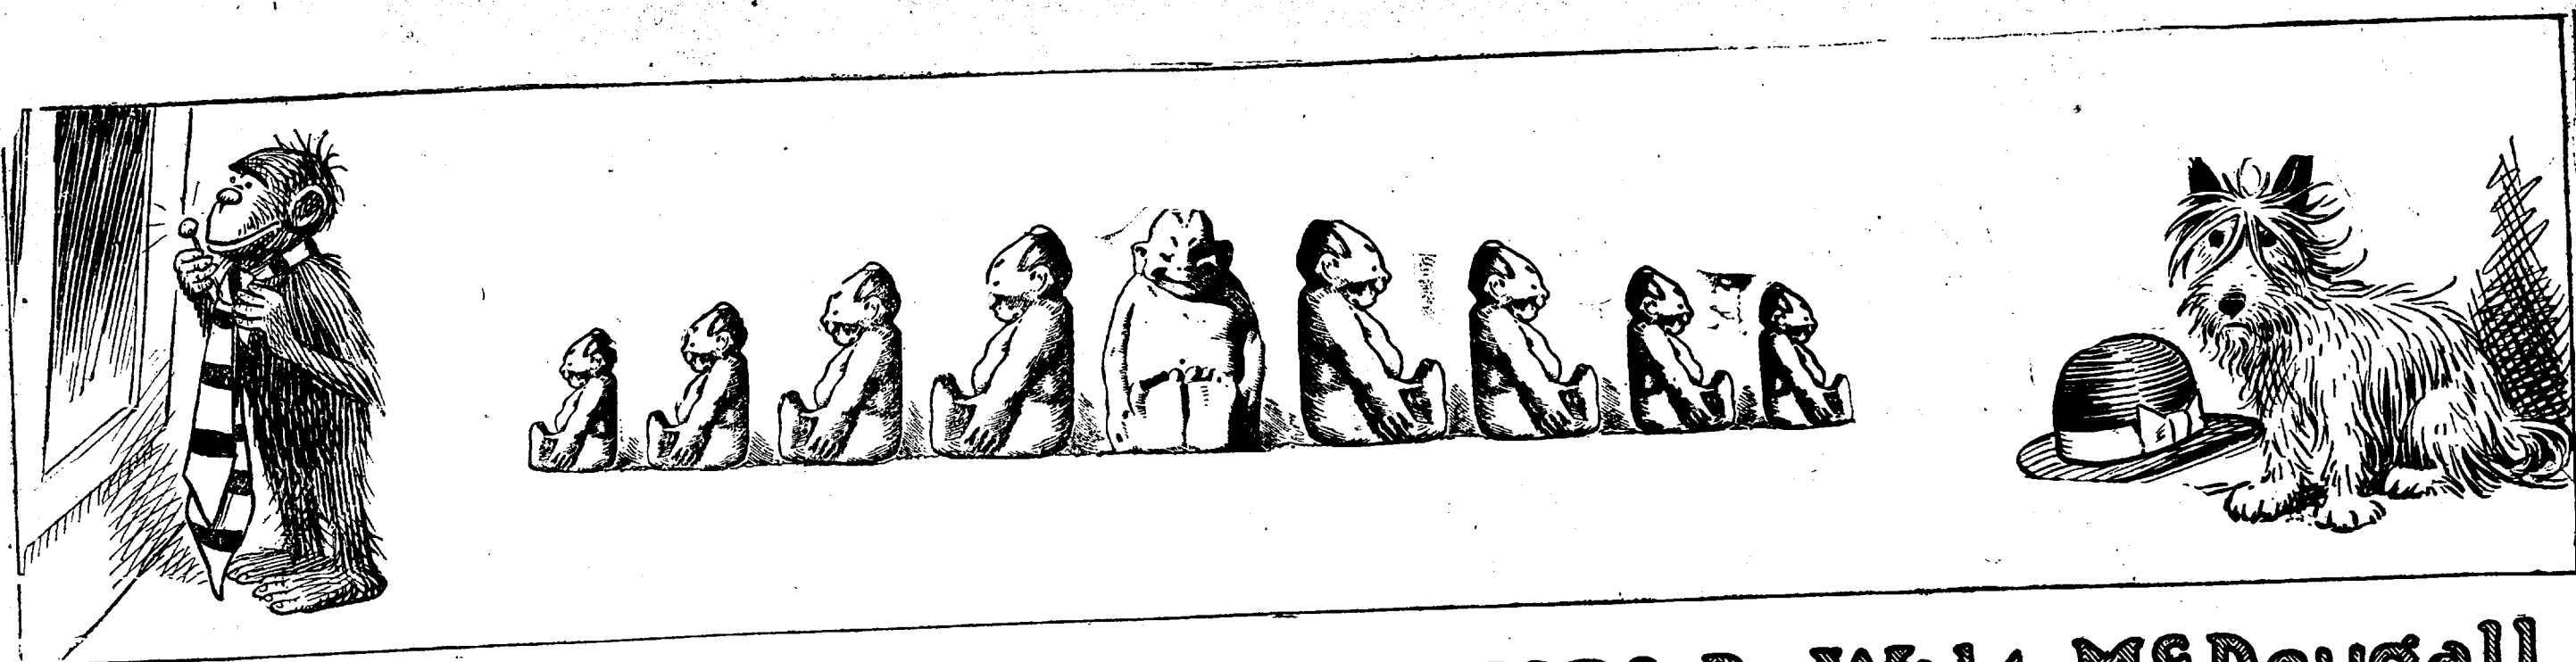

TRAINED FARMERS.

The United States offers wonderful opportunities to all who have the determination to work hard on the farms allotted them. It wants real farmers and not those who are experimenting. It offers all the privileges they are seeking--freedom in religion, freedom in thought and freedom from religious limitations. Its banks are extremely liberal in giving them the financial backing they need and those who have the sum needed for the original investment can readily find sufficient capital to back them in their future endeavors.

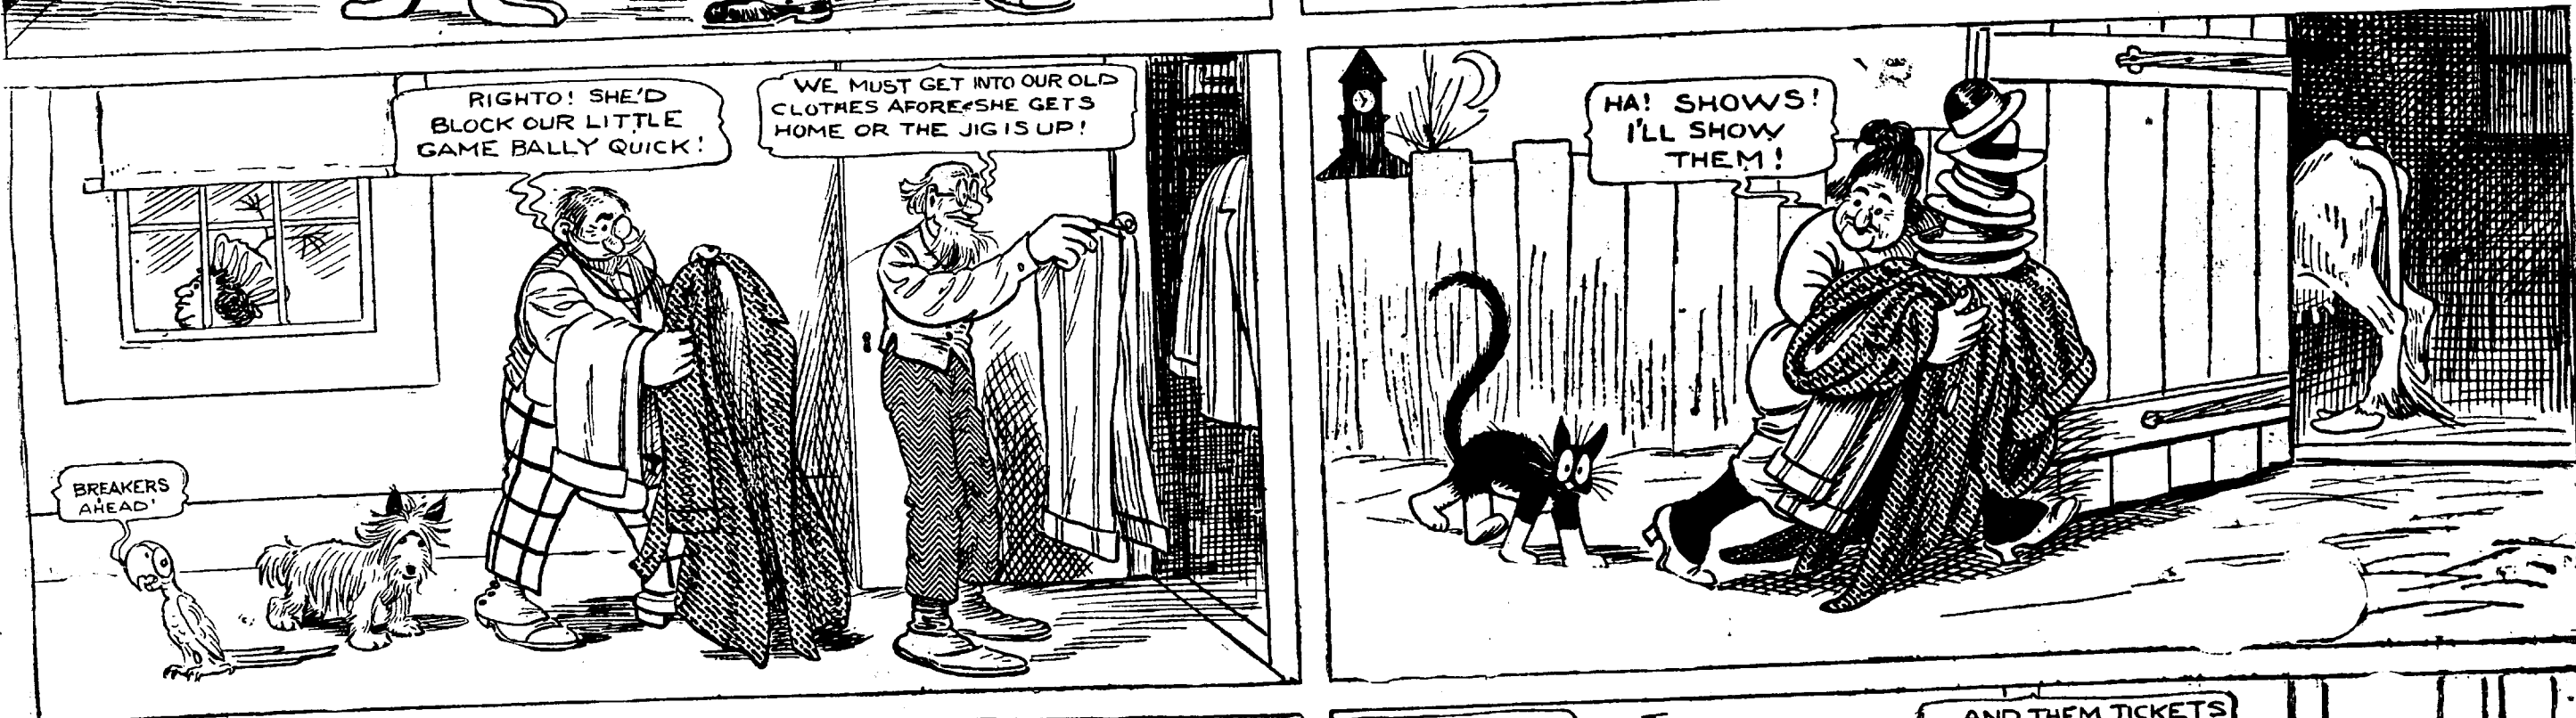

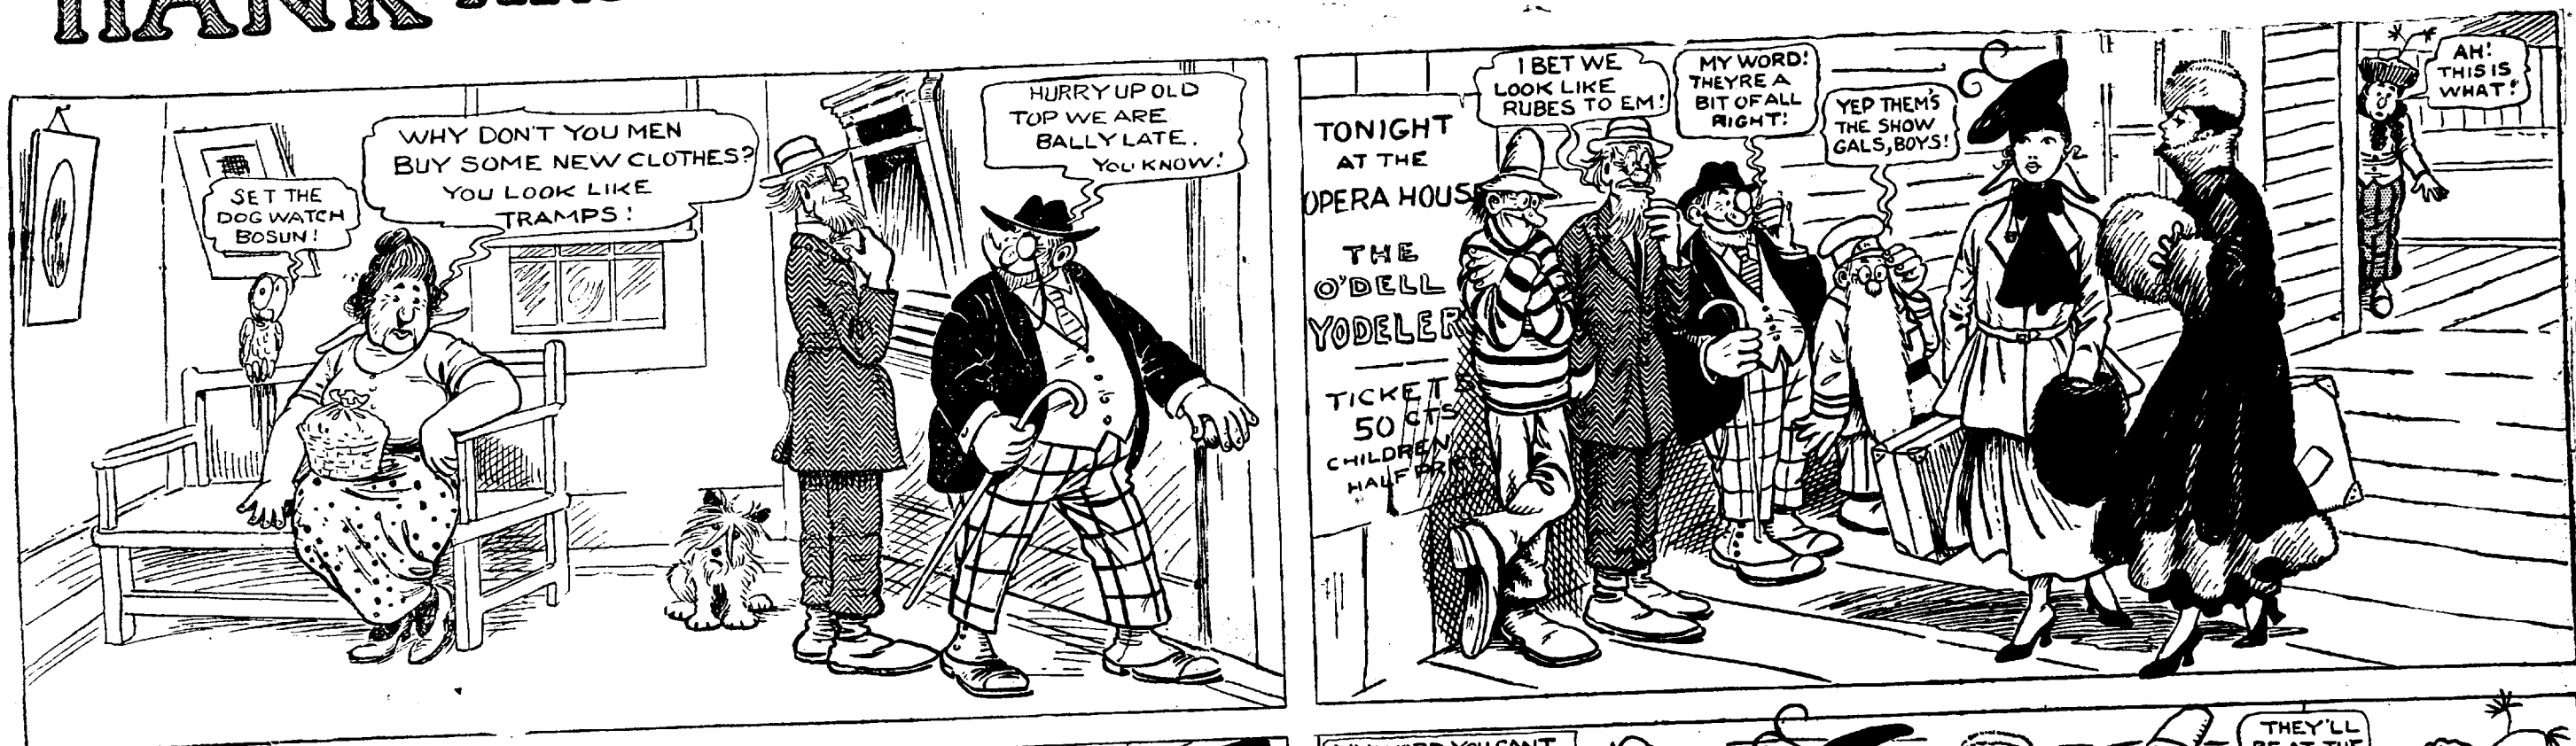

This new world freedom has proved a wonderful inducement to Russian Jews, who in many centuries have known freedom only as that concession of the Russian government that allowed them only to eat sufficient food to keep themselves alive and deprived them of every vestige of the right of citizenship and prevented them from acquiring or holding title to land.

But now the United States of America has thrown its doors wide open to the sufferers of Europe and has offered them a freedom they have never known before. To sturdy men and women it offers the advantages that were offered to Pilgrims at a date when the United States was nothing, yet through its Democratic principles was able to master such a force of fighting men that even Great Britain, the then most powerful nation of the world, was made to tremble and concede its defeat before a new nation that was founded on the terms of freedom.

ALLIES PLAN FIGHT THERE

Decide in Paris to Keep Up Their Campaign in Balkan States.

ISSUE WITH GREECE NEAR A SETTLEMENT

Germans Repulse French in New Attack in Champagne Sector.

Today's War News Given in Summary

A complete understanding on urgent questions relating to the conduct of the war has been reached between France and Great Britain, a Paris dispatch announces. Premier Briand and War Secretary Gallieni, of France, and Foreign Secretary Gray and War Secretary Kitchener, of Great Britain, reached the agreement.

Another American steamer, the San Juan, of the New York and Porto Rico line, has been held up and searched by the French cruiser De Cartes, and two passengers, described as Germans, taken off.

All arrangements for demobilizing the Greek army have been made and it is expected a demobilization decree will be issued shortly, an Athens dispatch announces.

The current statement of the Bulgarian war office traces the Franco-British retirement as far south as the Rabbrova-Valandovo line. Valandovo is about 20 miles from the Greek border.

The Teutonic powers have more than a million men at their disposal in the Balkans, Premier Radoslawski, of Bulgaria, declares, according to a London news agency dispatch.

Enrollment for military service under the Earl of Derby's recruiting plan for Great Britain ends at midnight tonight. London dispatches tell of great crowds at the recruiting stations awaiting opportunity for enrollment during the closing hours.

Only artillery engagements are reported on the western war front, with the exception of minor trench fighting in the Champagne region.

Paris, Dec. 11.—(5:20 p. m.)—France and Great Britain decided today to continue the campaign in the Balkans and agreed on military measures designed to assure the security of the expeditionary forces which landed at Saloniki.

A semi-official announcement issued this afternoon indicates that the French and British troops are being withdrawn from Serbia.

Questions of an urgent character relating to the conduct of the war were settled on the basis of a complete understanding today at a conference of representatives of France and Great Britain. Premier Briand and War Secretary Gallieni acted for France and Foreign Secretary Grey and War Secretary Kitchener for Great Britain.

A statement to the effect that the question at issue between Greece and the entente powers, arose on the way toward settlement, credited to the Ionian Islands, Greek minister of the interior, after a meeting of the cabinet council last night. M. Gounaris, the correspondent says, made this statement and added that he regarded the diplomatic situation as satisfactory.

FRENCH MEET REPULSE.

Russians Concentrating Troops on Rumanian Border.

Berlin, Dec. 11.—The French again have been repulsed and attacked the position recently taken by the Germans northeast of Sumail in the Champagne region, but were repulsed, the Germans retreating to their gains, according to official announcement today.

Advices received here today indicate that the Russians are hurriedly concentrating troops along the Rumanian border. The Austrian forces in Bukovina also are being reinforced heavily.

A Bucharest dispatch, forwarded by way of Budapest, says that the harbor at Rani, the Russian Danube port at which troops have been concentrated for some time, has been closed to passenger and freight traffic.

STILL FALLING BACK.

Retreat of Allied Forces in Balkans is Continuing.

London, Dec. 11.—The latest news from the Balkans indicates that the allies are still falling back, but without suffering the losses endured on the first days of the retreat, when the pursuing

U.S. WILL ASK SAFE CONDUCT

Acts on Boy-Ed and Von Papen at the Request of Berlin.

Accedes to U. S. Plea for Withdrawal of Two Attaches.

Washington, Dec. 11.—Secretary Lansing will immediately ask Great Britain and France, through their ambassadors here, for safe conduct for Captains Boy-Ed and von Papen, respectively naval and military attaches of the German embassy here, pursuant to the request of Emperor William, who personally recalled the officers.

Withdrawal of the attaches had been requested by the United States because of their activities which rendered them persona non grata to the American government. Emperor William's act was made known by Secretary Lansing after receiving a communication from the foreign office through Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador. The emperor also requested safe conduct for the successors of Captains Boy-Ed and von Papen, who will be named later.

Action on this, however, will await the naming of the successors. There was some speculation here today as to whether Great Britain and France would in event the two German attaches leave this country demand that they go under parole, pledging themselves not to participate in the European war. In some quarters it was thought that such a demand might be made. Officials of the German embassy, however, are said to believe it proper to ask for safe conduct for the attaches.

Officials were plainly gratified today over the outcome of a situation which had apparently been fraught with serious difficulties. As a result Secretary Lansing now is free to again take up negotiations with Germany for settlement of the Lusitania controversy and the cases of other foreign diplomatic and consular officers. It is expected that the case of Alexander von Nuber, Austrian consul general at New York, will be the first to be acted upon.

FARMERS ORGANIZE BIG ASSOCIATION

At a meeting of farmers from all sections of Allen county, Saturday afternoon in the assembly room of the court house a permanent organization was formed to be known as the Allen County Agricultural society. Officers were elected and plans were discussed relative to the purpose of the new association.

T. A. Coleman, of Purdue university, in charge of the county agents at Indiana, was the principal speaker at the meeting. BEVY OF CAPTIVATING BEAUTIES TAGGING FOR HOPE HOSPITAL.

More men simply couldn't resist Saturday, and thereby hangs the tale of probably the most successful Hope hospital tag day of them all. In spite of the weather (which was considerable) hundreds of girls lay in wait for passersby on all downtown corners and applied the pacifiers. The girls at the left are Miss Janet Bauer, Miss Hilda Irmischer and Mrs. Helen Buckett Eby. Left to right in the lower picture, Miss Constance Bogart, Miss Margaret Evans, Miss Marjory Dailey, Miss Lillian Smith and Miss Mildred Weaver. In the upper picture Miss Evans, aided and abetted by Mrs. Ben H. Hudson, is seen waylaying and taking his hard-earned coin from a susceptible young man.

CASES OF 105 STRICKEN OFF

But 13 Remain to Be Tried on Election Charges at Indianapolis.

CHARGES AGAINST MANY DISMISSED

State's Showing in Bell Case Does Not Warrant Trial in These.

Indianapolis, Dec. 11.—Charges against 105 of the remaining 118 defendants in the Marion county election conspiracy cases were dismissed by Special Judge W. H. Eichhorn on the action of Prosecutor A. J. Rucker here today.

The prosecutor said that in view of the showing made in the trial of Mayor Joseph E. Bell, on the conspiracy charges, he did not believe the state had sufficient evidence to warrant going to trial with the 105 cases.

Remain to Be Tried. The thirteen defendants who remain to be tried after the ruling today are: Herman Adam, inspector of weights and measures; Samuel V. Perrot, chief of police; Waylan Sander and Morton C. Hulise, police sergeants; Roy A. Pope, police detective; William F. Kissel, city nurse contractor; James A. Lucas, police court bailiff; Irving Hardy and Lee

WOULD HAVE TO LICK STAMP AND CURSE THE DEMOCRATS.

Washington, Dec. 11.—"Every time a man wrote a bank check he would have to lick a stamp and curse the democratic party," declared Senator Tillman, democrat, today, announcing he proposed to fight President Wilson's suggestion that a stamp on bank checks be included in the war revenue law. "I prefer an increased graduated income tax and whenever a man has an income of $1,000,000 I would take all in excess of that," Senator Tillman added. "A million a year is enough for any man and the government needs the money."

Annual Tag Day Will Net $1,500 for Hope Hospital

Undaunted by the wintry winds and a snow storm, two hundred fair maidens of Fort Wayne were Saturday selling tags for the benefit of the Hope hospital and judging from the most generous response on the part of the public it is believed that in excess of $1,500 will be realized. On every street corner and throughout the entire business district of the city the girls with their trays of tags held up every person they saw and to try to escape them was out of the question. As a matter of fact but few persons made the attempt, and still a few number refused to at least donate something when approached. Now and then the girls would be unceremoniously turned down, but not often. The contributions would run all the way from a nickel to a dollar and in a few instances more.

According to reports reaching the tag day headquarters in the Arcade building, on West Berry street, the interest manifested far surpasses previous years and it is believed that a new record will be set in the number of persons tagged.

At the noon hour the girls were given free lunch at the headquarters, all of which was donated by members of the committee. Saturday evening the nurses from Hope hospital will do the tagging. They will be properly chaperoned and will remain on the streets until after the theaters close.

Tag day is held annually by the Woman's Hope Hospital committee, being started three years ago. Fifteen hundred dollars were realized the first year and $1,300 last year. Mrs. Justin N. Study is chairman of the committee this year.

The storm was the severest at Lafayette and made the operation of interurban cars most difficult. Many of the cars arriving from the west are covered with sleet and snow.

Sharp Receives Appointment. Announcement was made Saturday of the appointment of Ross Sharp to the position of chief engineer of the traction company, succeeding W. J. Young, who has resigned. Young expects to make his future home with his father at Huntstown. "The pay car made its regular trip Friday, paying the employees on all divisions of the road."

NEGLECTANCE CAUSED DAY-LITE EXPLOSION

Coroner Kruse Believes Over Pressure Responsible for Accident.

Over pressure in the generator was responsible for the explosion at the plant of the Day-Lite Gas company, Friday morning, that killed Herman Bohne and Archibald Spear and endangered property and lives within a radius of a quarter of a mile, according to investigations that have been conducted by Coroner Edward H. Kruse and his deputy, R. B. Garmire. The coroner stated Saturday that he intended to make his investigation most thorough in an effort to ascertain whether there had been any criminal negligence and for that reason it will be several days before a verdict is rendered.

Investigation by the coroner has revealed that even though Bohne or Spear had been smoking or even though they had lighted a match no explosion could have taken place providing the top of the tank in which the gas was generated was securely fastened. Consequently, there is but one other solution and that is that the pressure was permitted to exceed the maximum, which was 275 pounds.

Did Not Watch Gauge. In the manufacture of the gas carbide and water are first placed in a tank four feet high and fourteen inches in diameter on the inside. After this has been done the top is fastened securely and the generator started. It was the duty of Bohne and Spear to then leave this building and fill the small tanks in which the gas is placed for the consumers. This was done in a building about forty feet west of the generator and also contained a gauge showing the exact pressure of the tank. When the pressure reached 275 pounds it was Bohne's or Spear's duty to turn it off and this is the very thing it is believed by the coroner they failed to do.

Everything indicates that the two men were out in the yard or in the building that was blown up when the explosion took place, and if this is true they were not watching the gauge and permitted the pressure to exceed the maximum.

Those familiar with the manufacture of gas of this character declare that the company should have provided for an automatic arrangement whereby it would not have been necessary for anybody to have watched the gauge. In other words, they contend that when the pressure had reached the maximum some provision should have been made so that it have been automatically released. Manager E. J. Wolfeld, of the plant, declares that he does not know how this could have been done. Similar plants have been installed elsewhere, he declares, and no trouble has ever occurred before. According to Rudolph Humble, of the Fort Wayne Gas Welding company, who has been in the plant since its installation, he has never seen any trouble.

TRIES TO PREVENT RAISING OF FLAG

Culprit Cuts Rope at No. 8 School in Adams Township.

Much mystery surrounds the cutting of the rope with which a new flag was to have been raised at No. 8 school house, in Adams township, Friday, which was discovered, however, just a few hours before the time set for the celebration that was held in connection with the occasion.

That the act was done maliciously and in an effort to prevent the unfurling of the American flag to the breezes is generally believed in Adams township, and the apprehension of the culprit will result in vigorous prosecution. Patriotic citizens of the township are not so much concerned over the cutting of the rope as they are over the motive prompting it, and if in their midst lives a man who, by his depredation intended to insult the flag, they want to know who he is.

The cut rope was discovered by Charles E. Irwin, teacher at No. 8 school, Friday morning, and he lost no time in making the necessary repairs, which required the greater part of the morning, necessitating the lowering of the pole and putting it back in place again. The fact that the pole and rope had been in place for about two weeks and no effort was made to damage it until the night before the date of the flag raising, leads to the belief that an attempt was made to prevent the flag from being raised.

Nevertheless the ceremonies were held and were witnessed by a large crowd. D. O. McComb, superintendent of the schools of the county; Clarence Henry, county agricultural agent, and E. H. Lane were the principal speakers. Two old veterans of the civil war raised the flag and as it was unfurled to the breezes all heads were removed and everybody cheered.

HARRY S. NEW WANTS PLACE

Enters Campaign for Republican Nomination for Senatorship.

THINKS HE CAN BE NOMINATED

Feels Free to Enter Race Since Retirement of Hugh Miller.

Indianapolis, Dec. 11.—Capt. Harry S. New, republican national committeeman for Indiana for a number of years, today announced that he would be a candidate for the republican nomination for United States senator, subject to the primary to be held March 7, 1916.

Mr. New decided to make the race following the withdrawal of Hugh Th. Miller, who was forced out of the running by ill-health. The statement announcing Mr. New's candidacy follows in part:

"Last spring and summer I was strongly urged to become a candidate by hundreds of friends in every section of the state. At that time the friends of Hugh Th. Miller felt that that gentleman, having borne the burden of the battle in 1914, when success was impossible, was entitled to another nomination this year when victory was assured and to that opinion I subscribed. The lamentable physical breakdown, which has taken Mr. Miller out of the contest, will be deplored by all who know him and by no man more than I, but it makes a vacancy in the field of candidates into which I feel free to step.

"I believe I can be nominated and, if nominated, that I can and will receive the undivided support of my party."

MAYOR POWERS OF ST. PAUL IS HERE

First Commission Executive of Twin City is an Enthusiast.

Hon. Winn Powers, mayor of St. Paul, Minn., was a welcome caller at the city hall, Saturday, and spent some time with Mayor W. J. Hosey and Messrs. R. E. Kelly, F. E. Singrey and Henry Hilgeman, of the board of works, discussing matters of municipal government. Mayor Powers is en route home from the waterways congress at Washington, D. C., to which he was a delegate from the northwest, and stopped in Fort Wayne a few hours to see some relatives and to take a train for Angola, where he will visit members of the Powers family. He is a son of Winn Powers, one of the early pioneers of St. Paul, and is a cousin of the late Judge Stephen A. Powers and the late Judge Frank M. Powers. He has spent much of his life in the northwest and is prominent in the affairs of that region.

Mayor Powers is the first chief executive of the Minnesota capital to be elected under the commission form of government adopted by the people of St. Paul less than two years ago and he has been in office a year and a half. For ten years prior to his election as mayor he served in the assembly, or upper chamber of the city council, which is a bicameral body. He is an expert in municipal affairs and his reputation extends far beyond the boundaries of his city.

Mayor Powers is an intense advocate of the non-partisan plan of municipal government and strong for the commission form of rule. He says this plan has worked admirably in St. Paul and highly to the satisfaction of the public. He is a Wilson democrat of pronounced type, but considers partisan politics and methods out of place in city affairs. Mayor Powers is just now much interested in motorized fire equipment and while in the city took occasion to inspect such apparatus of the sort as Fort Wayne now provided with. During the afternoon Mayor Hosey and the members of the board of works took Mayor Powers on an automobile tour of the city to visit some of the institutions.

FINDS FOR CITY IN INJUNCTION SUIT

Traction Company Loses in Attempt to Restrain Assessments.

In the superior court, Saturday, Judge Carl Yapple rendered his decision in the suit of the Fort Wayne & Northern Indiana Traction company against the board of works of the city of Fort Wayne and the Grace Construction company for an injunction to restrain the collection of $1,769 levied against the plaintiff as an assessment for certain portions of the State boulevard pavement for which the plaintiff is to pay. The complaint was that the primary assessment was $882.54 and that this had been raised to $1,769 in the final assessment. The plaintiff wanted the assessment cut to the primary figures. The court finds that the plaintiff should pay the final assessment. It was agreed by the parties to the suit before the hearing that the decision of the court should be abided by and that there should be no appeal, so that presumably Judge Yapple's decision ends the litigation.

He says she has refused to live with him, although given opportunities to do so. He asks the custody of a 12-year-old son, F. R. Dulin is the plaintiff's attorney.

FIND FIRE ABOARD BRITISH FREIGHTER

Tynningham Dashes Back Soon After Sailing from New York.

New York, Dec. 11.—The British freighter Tynningham, sugar laden, put back toward New York today soon after she had passed quarantine, fire having broken out aboard. She passed quarantine returning, with smoke pouring from after hold No. 4, and anchored off the Statue of Liberty.

The Tynningham was bound for Liverpool. Twenty minutes after she had passed the Narrows, outward bound, fire was discovered. The vessel immediately put about and rushed to anchor-orage under full steam. On Dec. 5, while at the Erie basin in Brooklyn, fire broke out in the hold that was the seat of today's flame. Search at the time disclosed fragments of a broken bottle believed to have contained chemicals which caused an explosion.

Some Chicken! It is Worth $100,000

"Lady Eglington" appears to be an ordinary chicken. If you saw her crossing the street to get on the other side, you would pay less attention to her than to a fly if it should settle on your nose. That, of course, would be due to the fact that you did not know that "Lady Eglington" was "some chicken." She is a little White Leghorn hen which has laid just 314 eggs in 365 days, thereby winning the world's championship. Her home is at Eglington farms, Greensboro, Md., and her owner, A. A. Christian, values the hen at $100,000.

DR. HOOPER TELLS OF ASSOCIATION'S WORK

Says That Organization Has More Than $9,000,000 in Reserve.

That the Woman's Benefit association of the Macabres, is in a most prosperous condition, was shown by figures given by Dr. Elizabeth Hooper, supreme medical examiner in her address Friday evening at the district rally of the association. Dr. Hooper declared that more than $9,000,000 is held in reserve and during the last eight years the association has lost a net profit of $10,000. An average of $3,000 is paid each day in death claims.

Dr. Hooper spoke on the subject: "The Hospital and Home Service." Twenty-five years ago the order was not in existence, she said, while now the benefit membership numbers more than 170,000.

Delegates from all parts of the Twelfth district were in attendance and a most pleasant day was enjoyed. Mrs. Grace Meredith, great commander and supreme trustee, was present and took part in the day's program.

ANGOLA MAN KILLS SELF ACCIDENTALLY

Angola, Ind., Dec. 11.—While cleaning a shotgun with which he intended to go hunting, yesterday afternoon, W. Irving, aged 50 years, was killed instantly when the fowling piece was accidentally discharged. The charge tore a large hole in Irving's chest just above the heart. Mrs. Irving, who was in the upper part of the house, heard the report of the gun and rushing to the room where her husband had been at work, found him dead in a pool of blood. There is no reason to suspect suicide. Irving had been for many years a barber here, but lately had entered the automobile business. Besides his wife he leaves a daughter, who is Mrs. P. R. Warrick, of Fort Wayne.

MANAGER GREENLAND REDUCING EXPENSES

Retrenchment and reduction of expenses to the very minimum will be the policy of Sam. W. Greenland, who a few days ago was appointed general manager of the Fort Wayne and Springfield traction line, in an effort to put the road on a paying basis.

The office force at Decatur will remain unchanged, except that the stenographer, Miss Celeste Vemhoff, has been dispensed with. Paul Reinking will continue as auditor and Homer Ruhl and Miss Flora Flederdjohann as ticket agents.

Much of the repair work will be done in the car barns of the Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana Traction company, in this city, and as a result, but one man of the six maintained in repair work in the barns at Decatur will be retained. The section hand force has been reduced from ten men to one. A. M. Henry will continue as roadmaster.

Only nine of the two hundred old stockholders attended a meeting at Decatur Friday, called by Charles Dirksen, former vice president of the Decatur line. The purpose of the meeting was to make an effort to raise enough money to repurchase the road. Nothing was accomplished. It is said that if $30,000 can be raised the road could be taken over and the main offices, power house and car barns retained in Decatur. Mr. Dirksen had planned to raise this money by an assessment of five per cent. on all the old stockholders.

Perry LeVine and Albert H. Gilmore, the two young men who caused a sensation here a week ago by appearing at the headquarters of the striking street car men with a proposal to engage expert services to the strikers to commit arson, wreck cars and slug strike-breakers and were turned over to the police after being tricked into detailing their proposals to a pair of officers posing as officers of the carmen's union, were tried in the city court on loitering charges Saturday morning, and fined $25 and costs each. That the two fellows are a pair of bluffers was shown by both their own testimony and information from the secret service division of the Chicago police department. Charles L. Laskin, acting chief of the detective department in Chicago, wrote to Chief Charles Lanz here that LeVine resides at 1236 Washington avenue, Chicago, with his brother-in-law, Joseph Schultz, and has a good reputation in that city, and that Gilmore's true name is Abe Greenberg, his home with his father at 3219 West Twelfth street, and his reputation had been stuck to his alias for a time and then admitted his true name, but would not admit a word of his story that he had been much employed by the Chicago secret service chiefs to do "gun-sling" work. He said also that he had served two years in the regular army and had seen much service in the Philippines. On the stand to the police that they had been brought here by the officials of the traction company to propose a program of violence to the strikers in order to ascertain "how far the carmen's union would be willing to go." The two were arrested by Detective Sergeant Joseph Brennan and built George Eisenhut, who impersonated carmen's union officers at the strike headquarters and to them detailed how they would set fire to the city hotel, where strike-breakers are quartered, wreck cars and slug carmen.

Jitney Driver is Fined. A. A. Mosier, of Lagrange, Ind., who has been driving a jitney bus in Fort Wayne since the street car strike began, was fined $5 and costs by Judge Kerr for unlawfully making a turn to the wrong side of a street at an intersection. The principal witness was Clem Freiburger, 2118 Drexel boulevard, into whose motorcycle Mosier drove his jitney at the corner of Cass and Fifth streets, Nov. 1. Freiburger had his right foot badly injured and still goes on crutches. He was taken home by Mosier, who at the time offered to settle all damages so that he would not have to report the accident to police headquarters. Mosier was arrested Friday afternoon near the court house when Freiburger saw the man drive his machine up to the curb. Mosier denied his guilt strongly, but later was tricked into an admission of it.

Other City Court Cases. Cornelius Harper, a drunk, was turned loose and Tom Mosier, another one, was sent to jail to wait until Monday.

Charles Dennis, the Zanesville sport who celebrated a basketball victory Wednesday night by getting drunk and going to sleep on a porch in the southern part of the city, was fined $1 and costs and went back to jail.

Margaret Daley, a middle-aged woman of respectable family, was charged with disorderly conduct and put under $500 bond for her appearance Tuesday. She was then taken to the county infirmary, where she will be treated for alcoholism. The woman has been drinking heavily and had made a scene of disorder at her home, where she wrecked a talking machine and some records.

NEWS OF FORT WAYNE'S NEIGHBORS

LONG RESIDENT IN ADAMS.

Decatur, Ind., Dec. 11.—Joseph D. Lower, one of the best known men and farmers in Adams county, passed away Friday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Fred Linn, on Merwin avenue, in Decatur. The deceased was a son of William and Catherine Lower and was born in Ohio. In 1852 the parents moved to Adams county, settling in Union township, where he grew to manhood and much of his life was spent. Mr. Lower was united in marriage with Miss Rebecca J. Congleton in 1867. Following their marriage they settled on a farm in Union township where they resided until 1887, when they sold it and purchased another one in Root township, near Decatur, on which he had since resided. For most of his life he has been a faithful member of the United Brethren church. He is survived by the widow and three children.

HOG CHOLERA CHECKED

Huntington, Ind., Dec. 11.—An epidemic of hog cholera that has alarmed farmers in the southwestern part of the county during the last six weeks and caused a financial loss estimated at several thousands of dollars is now under control, according to men who have been fighting it. About twenty farms near Mt. Etna were under voluntary quarantine while the epidemic was worst. The most disastrous results were within an area of four square miles. Vaccination of well hogs as soon as one animal in a bunch became affected prevented much loss. Those farmers who had their hogs vaccinated before the epidemic reached their farms invariably suffered no loss. It was said. The first case developed six weeks ago on the M. R. Fisher farm.

MADE IT EASY FOR THE COURT

Hartford City, Ind., Dec. 11.—It doesn't pay to tell a man he's a liar, especially in open court. Frank Gallagher, sign painter, will vouch for that. Gallagher was arrested on a charge of provoking a fight with his employer, Richard Elsey. He denied the charge. Elsey was in court, the case being called before Justice Underhill. Elsey and Gallagher got into words and Gallagher up and called Elsey a liar, adding, it is said, a few trimmings. The first charge brought against Gallagher was then dismissed and another charging the same thing filed. To this the defendant could make no defense, for the entire court had heard him provoke Elsey by calling him "liar."

EAGLES MAY NOT REORGANIZE

Hartford City, Ind., Dec. 11.—The Eagles' lodge in Hartford City may not be reorganized after all. Although there has been a great deal of talk about reorganizing the lodge prominent members who belonged at the time the charter was taken away by the grand lodge, are now authority for the statement that the efforts to reorganize probably will fall through.

The Eagles' lodge was one of the largest in the city at the time the charter was taken away. Dr. G. W. Sweigart, who has charge of the efforts to reorganize the lodge here, stated that there was no truth in the statement that the lodge would not be reorganized.

MAGNOLIA TREE IN BLOOM.

Bluffton, Indiana, December 11.—A magnolia tree in bloom, a decided novelty for Northern Indiana, especially in December, is being exhibited at the city waterworks, where it is growing and blossoming in a big tub inside the dynamo room. The room is always at summer heat and there is plenty of light so that there is no reason that the tree should not be in blossom all winter. The tree was grown from a start sent by a southern friend to Mayor John Mock. The blossoms give off a fragrance that can be noticed all over the big dynamo and pump room.

NEW CHURCH FOR GARRETT

Garrett, Ind., Dec. 11.—The Christian church plans to spend $15,000 on a new church building, which will probably be erected next year. The building committee submitted plans to the congregation last Thursday night and they were accepted. At a meeting Tuesday evening arrangements were made to have the architect to proceed accordingly. The plans call for a building 60x90 feet in dimensions.

FIRST DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE

Huntington, Ind., Dec. 11.—Charles C. Ashley has made the first announcement of candidacy for a nomination on the democratic county ticket next year. Mr. Ashley wants the nomination for sheriff on that ticket, and thinks that by getting in early he is getting the jump on the others who expect to make the race.

HUNTINGTON POULTRY SHOW

Huntington, Ind., Dec. 11.—According to reports from Harry T. Young, secretary of the Huntington County Poultry association, the arrangements for the annual show to be held in the Coliseum in Huntington, January 18 to 22, are proceeding rapidly. It has been decided to give five awards in each class, the first three carrying monetary prizes and the fourth and fifth being honorary.

WITH W. U. CO. 30 YEARS

Bluffton, Ind., Dec. 11.—Daniel C. Vollmer has completed his twenty-fifth year in charge of the Western Union Telegraph company, and his thirtieth year in the employ of the company. Mr. Vollmer is entitled to retire on a pension, but he will continue in charge of the local office as long as his health continues.

LONG LOST MAN IS DEAD

Bluffton, Ind., Dec. 11.—Ezra Hummcutt, 72, who was located at Middleton, Ind., recently by Wells county relatives, after an unexplained absence of fifty years, died yesterday after a long illness with paralysis. The remains will probably be brought to Bluffton for burial. Bert Hummcutt of Poneto is a brother and there are numerous other brothers and sisters in Huntington county. In the event that the funeral is held in Idaho, none of the Wells county relatives will be able to attend.

WED HALF CENTURY AGO.

Lagrange, Ind., Dec. 11.—Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Trexler, an aged and well known pioneer couple of this county, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their farm home east of Lagrange this week. The event was made the occasion of a very joyous family gathering. All of the children and many of the grandchildren of the venerable couple were present and enjoyed a big family dinner at noon. Mr. and Mrs. Trexler were married in this county on December 7, 1865. They went at once to the farm which they now occupy and have resided there continuously all of these fifty years. Mr. Trexler is 75 years of age and was born in Ashland county, Ohio. His wife is a native of Germany but came with her parents to this county when but a child. Her age is 69 years. They have ten children, all of whom reside in this county except one daughter, Mrs. Homer Adams, who lives in Kendallville.

FARMER KICKED BY HORSE.

Warsaw, Ind., Dec. 11.—Newton Herenden, a farmer residing east of Silver Lake, was badly injured by a kick from a horse. He was passing behind the animal when it suddenly kicked at him, striking him on the face and shoulder. The force of the blow was lessened somewhat because of the fact that Mr. Herenden was so close to the animal, otherwise it is probable that the injury would have proven fatal. It is thought that Mr. Herenden was rendered unconscious for a short time and he still was in a dazed condition when Mrs. Herenden discovered him sitting on a log in the yard.

CHRISTMAS CASH IN AUBURN.

Auburn, Ind., Dec. 11.—Over $10,000 was turned loose in Auburn today when the Christmas Savings club organized by the Savings Loan & Trust company just a year ago began to liquidate. Between four and five hundred members of the club will receive checks varying in amounts in accordance with the classes in which they may have started when the club was organized. The exact sum to be paid out in checks is $10,128.22. The largest of the checks amounts to $65.47 and the minimum is $12.74.

VICTIM OF TRAGEDY IN FAR WEST.

Ligonier, Ind., Dec. 11.—The community was shocked Thursday when news reached the city announcing that Mrs. Mary Yeager-Stevens and her daughter, Miss Edith, had lost their lives when their home was destroyed by fire Tuesday night at Artesia, N. M. Particulars of the terrible affair are lacking. The brief news received by Mrs. A. Yeager, an aunt in Ligonier, simply told of the cause of death and that the ladies would arrive at Kimmell Friday for burial. Mrs. Stevens was a daughter of the late Joel Yeager, buried here a few weeks ago. She was born in Ligonier and grew to womanhood here.

LIBERTY CENTER HAS FIRE.

Bluffton, Ind., Dec. 11.—The town of Liberty Center had an exciting experience Friday when the roof of the Frank Lee residence caught fire from a defective flue. Fortunately the fire was discovered before it gained great headway and a bucket brigade which was quickly formed did valiant work and the loss was confined to the destruction of the roof. A heavy fog and entire absence of wind aided the fire-fighters in preventing spread of the flames. The damage is covered by insurance.

ADAMS COUNTY PIONEER DIES.

Decatur, Ind., Dec. 11.—Christian Conrad, one of the pioneer and well known residents of Preble township, died suddenly about noon Friday. Mr. Conrad was a sufferer from heart trouble and

VAN NUYS FAVORS ADAIR.

Anderson Man Will Not Make Race for Governor.

Indianapolis, Dec. 10.—Fred Van Nuyss of Anderson, has withdrawn as a democratic candidate for governor. The withdrawal also carried with it an announcement he would not be a candidate for congress from the Eighth district. It was expected this announcement would be made, as most democrats had not thought Van Nuyss would continue in the race. Van Nuyss says J. A. M. Adair is from his district, an older and more deserving man and entitled to his support. He also says he has not the financial requirements to make a primary race against Adair.

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING.

Isaiah 23:1-10.

1 O Lord, that art my God; I will exalt thee, I will praise thy name, for thou hast done wonderful things; thy counsels of old are faithfulness and truth.

2 For thou hast made of a city an heap; of a defended city a ruin: a palace of strangers to be no city; it shall never be built.

3 Therefore shall the strong people glorify thee, the city of the terrible nations shall fear thee.

4 For thou hast been a strength to the poor, a strength to the needy in his distress, a refuge from the storm, a shadow from the heat, when the blast of the terrible ones is as a storm against the wall.

5 Thou shalt bring down the noise of strangers, as the heat in a dry place; even the heat of the shadow of a cloud: the branch of the terrible ones shall be brought low.

6 And in this mountain shall the Lord of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined.

7 And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the wall that is spread over all nations.

8 He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth: for the Lord hath spoken it.

9 And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation.

10 For in this mountain shall the hand of the Lord rest, and Moab shall be trodden down under him, even as straw is trodden down for the dunghill.

Reforming Muncie.

The Muncie case, in which Governor Ralston has served notice on Mayor Bunch that unless he enforces the law and cleans up the town the governor will be forced to take a hand and do it for him is bound to attract much interest all over the state. It has long been reasonably clear that Mayor Bunch's sympathies were decidedly with the wide-open element in the town; that he has permitted flagrant violations of the law and tolerated conditions repugnant to every sense of decency and order.

It is apparent that public patience at Muncie has been strained to the limit, and with impeachment charges filed the aid of the governor has been sought to enforce some respect for law and order on the part of the constituted authorities of that city. The governor has given the mayor fair warning. If he is compelled to take further steps, they are likely to be both drastic and effectual.

What evidence is in the hands of the governor regarding lawless conditions at Muncie has not yet been disclosed, but it is clear that a desperate situation must have been revealed in order to move the governor to interference. The state executive is naturally reluctant to meddle in the affairs of a city. It is going to be an awful shock to Mayor Bunch's administration to discover the hitherto unsuspected fact that there is a higher power than his own.

The recent sale of the Indiana Lighting company, of which the Fort Wayne artificial gas system is a part, marks the virtual retirement of the Murdock interests from Indiana public utilities, in which they have figured actively for more than a quarter of a century. "We are mighty glad to be out of it," Charles Murdock is quoted as having declared, "for public utilities are always a football for the public," and his statement is a truism that will be generally admitted. When the public longs to kick something, it usually finds a public service corporation near by and takes a wallop at that. Yet there are thousands of men in Indiana eager to take the job of being a public service corporation magnate, and those already at it manage to put up a pretty fair presentment of prosperity.

Official investigation has absolved Patrolman Glenn Johnson, whose name became involved in the disappearance of tickets from a local moving picture theater, and the officer has been permitted to resume his beat, so that the unfortunate incident is closed. Patrolman Johnson was credited with the statement that the affair was the outcome of an effort of others on the force to "get him," and that is the phase of the affair most important to the public. If there is discord, bickering and petty jealousy in the police ranks, there cannot be high grade police service. Police Chief Lenz owes it to the city to unload the trouble-makers and the incompetents, and we trust he will promptly and effectively address himself to that task. It may not be a pleasant one, but it is highly essential.

There will be genuine regret over the state, regardless of party affiliation, that it is the precarious state of health that has led to the retirement of Hugh Th. Miller from the race for the republican senatorial nomination. Indiana came to know Mr. Miller during his term as lieutenant governor, it entertains for him a large degree of respect and friendship, and he is distinctly an asset to his party in this state. It is profoundly hoped that he may be successful in his battle against disease which has laid its hand upon him.

There have been some extremely brief honeymoons in Fort Wayne, but in the light of that Whitley county case in which suit for divorce is filed three days after the nuptial ceremony, it is hardly worth while for any of the local aspirants for records in briefness of wedded bliss to enter the contest for the Northern Indiana championship. That Whitley county couple has won it, hands down.

Colonel Roosevelt has declined an invitation to deliver an address in Canada because he says he cannot trust himself to talk on the war in a foreign land. Occasionally the ex-president manifests a degree of discretion hitherto wholly unsuspected by his enemies who insist Colonel Roosevelt can always be depended upon to spill the beans.

So many federal probes of one thing and another are under way that one is moved to profound respect for the inventive genius that discovers so many things that need an investigation. Moreover, the new cases developing almost daily indicate that there is no danger whatever of a shortage in the supply.

Various business organizations are now suggesting amendments to the new seaman's law. Have you noted as an American characteristic that we no sooner get a law of any kind than we proceed to want it changed?

MR. MARSHALL

(Washington Star, Rep.)
Shall we hear anything further about denying Vice President Marshall's re-nomination?

Whatever there was to the gossip grew out of a story that Mr. Marshall was not "sound" on cloture; that he would not rule as desired last winter. Hence the suggestion of a different running-mate for Mr. Wilson. The hope was that Mr. Marshall would see the point, and rule "right" this winter and thus save his scalp.

If there was anything to the story alleging hostility on Mr. Marshall's part to gag rule for the senate, he stands abundantly vindicated now. No such procedure is possible. After a hasty and superficial examination the democratic caucus put the proposition to sleep. Whatever change may be made at this session, the senate will remain a deliberative body. Cloture, in the sense of a partisan asset to be used for partisan purposes—and that was the essence of the maneuver—is out of the question, fortunately for the senate, the country and the democratic party. No greater mistake could have been made.

Those who thus gossiped at Mr. Marshall's expense showed neither knowledge of the man, nor appreciation of the democracy's needs. He could get along without his party much better than his party without him. Denied endorsement, he could return to Indiana, reopen his law office, enjoy again the society of his old friends and neighbors, and get more and bigger fees than ever.

But his party next year will require to be brought as closely as possible to the people; and Mr. Marshall figures in popular discussion as "the human element" of the democratic outfit. The meaning of the phrase is that he is the best politician in the bunch, understands the everyday order of things much better than the others, and scores more readily with the rank and file of voters. While the president is bookish and a trifle reserved, Mr. Marshall is practical, hearty and in every way companionable.

If the ticket is not Wilson and Marshall again, the talents of a Philadelphia lawyer will be necessary to explain why. The reasons, geographical and other, that called him to the colors in 1912 still exist; and he has added to his strength by nearly three years of satisfactory service in the office to which he was then elected. Where could his party find his superior for the race?

STRAIGHT TALK ON ROADS

(Indiana Daily Times).

Much solid truth and food for reflection is to be found in the report of the good roads commission informally appointed some time ago by Gov. Ralston. This non-partisan commission, serving without pay and without legislative authority, nevertheless has rendered good service. It would be more than justified if for no other reason than the fact that it has boiled down for the taxpayer to study the actual road conditions as they exist in the state. Indiana's road troubles are enumerated by the commission briefly as follows:

"From almost every section of the state come complaints of unsatisfactory road conditions, either roads bad, not properly maintained, or cost excessive—frequently all three.

"The postoffice department reports 21,000 miles of post roads in Indiana in bad condition the whole or part of the year.

"The office of public roads report much unfit material is used by honest officials, because the state has no skilled department and laboratory to test the same for county and township officials.

"Thousands lose their lives each year by grade crossing and other road accidents. County and township officers can not negotiate effectively with railroad officials to correct this. A state department can.

"Indiana spends $15,000,000 each year, through 4,500 officials, for roads. Where does the money go? Is it honestly and efficiently expended? There is no one to gather and publish this information.

"The auto license tax is a state tax distributed to the counties to be expended on the roads. Has it been done? You don't know nor neither do we. There is no state officer to collect the information and report to the governor or the legislature.

general assembly, where, by, or by whom and how, the money was expended.

"The law requires a map to be made in each county by the superintendent showing the improved roads, etc. Has it been done? If so there is no state official to bring the maps together and publish them for general benefit.

"No law requires any road official to be other than a qualified voter, and yet they have to do with technical and difficult matters. They have no skilled state official to whom they can go for plans, advice, etc."

These are things for Indiana people to ponder on.

Prof. H. H. Hahn is Author of New Composition of Christmas Songs.

The feature in many of the programs to be given in observance of Christmas at Fort Wayne churches will be the rendition of the "Wechsel Gesang Fuer Weihnachten" or "A Cycle of Christmas Carols," the new selection composed by Prof. Herman H. Hahn, of this city.

The author of this new and pretty composition is a teacher at the Emmanuel Lutheran parochial schools and is also the organist of the same congregation. A year ago he composed a Christmas selection, but the one this year surpasses it in every way. The composition is made up of many of the familiar Christmas songs woven together in a very unique way.

The new musical selection has been written for either the English or the German language and is considered by many authorities on music to be a selection of unusual attractiveness. Orders from all parts of the United States have been received, which is another proof of its success.

The St. John Reformed church, of this city, will feature this selection in the Christmas program to be rendered on Christmas eve.

Society

With the approaching holidays come rumors of entertaining. In some instances it is not a rumor but a fact like the Woman's League ball on December 27. The dancing at this grand affair is not to be just a plain program of one-steps, two-steps or any other number of steps that dancing masters have either invented or revived from times past. There are to be innovations in the way of favor dances, such as the new eastern figure known as the Japanese parasol dance, and possibly the garland dance. But these are merely a hint to whet the desire to go. There is to be good music for the dancing. Besides there are to be present many out of town guests, society people and several distinguished guests as well so that everyone will want to go all the more. As for those who do not dance, they will be just as welcome for there are to be card tables for a game of bridge, five-hundred, euchre or pedro or one may merely sit and look on and visit with friends. Only don't miss taking your invitation with you when you go.

IS A PROMISING YOUNG DANCER.

MISS ESTHER CENTLIVRE.

Miss Esther Centlivre, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Centlivre, takes to dancing so naturally that she has made rapid progress in the few lessons she has taken. Naturally graceful and light of movement this young girl finds it an easy matter to pose and as she likes to work hard, too, there's no telling how much she can accomplish in a few years' time. This picture shows Miss Centlivre in a pose of a dance number she gave at a musical recital under the auspices of Mrs. E. H. Kirkland, who presented her voice students at the Orpheum theater on Saturday morning.

Arnam. Act 2 of Richard III is the lesson.

International peace is the big topic which the members of the Twentieth Century club will take up at the meeting next Thursday, with Mrs. E. H. Briggs. Constructive peace, forever opposed to peace and the future of war, war brides and "Moloch" are individual topics of a big program.

At the regular meeting of the Morning Musical society yesterday, non-members of the society who assisted in the program were Frederick Hughes, the excellent tenor of the Orpheum, who sang two numbers in a musically manner that was decidedly pleasing. George Baith, who played the second piano to Miss Helene Spindler's fine rendition of the MacDowell concerto in D minor and Margaret Fry, Grace Roman and Helen Strodel, dance pupils. The dancing was to music which Miss Spindler played and was all very pretty. Miss Spindler played as encore to the concerto, Homer Parliott's "The Dragon Fly," a composition of which Americans can well be proud, knowing it was written by an American, especially if played with the delightful spirit in which Miss Spindler gave it. Miss Larimore's two dances were the "Snowflake," from the Snowflake ballet, and the water lily dance to music by MacDowell. Both dances were in costume and charming, the first displaying Miss Larimore's technique and fine toe work, and the latter a most artistic and delicate interpretation.

SYRUP OF FIGS FOR CROSS, SICK FEVERISH CHILD

If little stomach is sour, liver torpid or bowels clogged.

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it can not cause injury. No difference what ails your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle. Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.—Advertisement.

FRIENDSHIP SAVED EXPLORER STEFANSSON

When Death Was Drawing Near on the Barren Arctic Wastes.

By Jack Jungmeyer.

Seattle, Wash., Dec. 11.—After the world had given up Vilhjálmur Stefánsson, Arctic explorer, as lost, friendship found a way to reach him.

It was the motive power that sent

Captain Louis Lane.

Captain Louis Lane, veteran whaler, beating up into the icy barrens where he recently found the explorer walking along a desolate coast under the midnight sun. The two have known each other for years.

Not only did Captain Lane give Stefánsson a new security on life and make possible further scientific research, but he brought back one of the most remarkable stories of nerve and romance ever brooded in the north.

Puts Faith in Rifle.

It is the story of Stefánsson and his rifle. His own life and that of his three companions, as well as the fate of the entire expedition, hinged on Stefánsson's reliance that he could with guns alone secure ample provisions.

When Lane found his friend on August 10, off the north coast of Banks' Land, the latter had just completed a six months' sled trip across the icy wastes, during which time he had shot every particle of food used by himself and three companions.

Didn't Miss a Meal.

They had not carried a pound of supplies. The chance was sinister. But "Stef" had dared and fortune had favored ed him. Seal had fallen to his rifle so regularly that the party had not missed a single meal in nearly 200 days of travel.

It is by such chances that the intrepid Stefánsson has been boring up into that misty region on top of the world where no man's foot had ever tracked.

It was because of such chances that the world had thought him lost. But Captain Lane, himself a chance-taker, hoped, if he did not believe, that the doughty Norseman had won thru to his goal and was keeping vigil for supplies.

"Stef" Was Glad.

"Yes, he was glad to see me, was 'Stef,'" said Lane, laconically. "They—Stefánsson, Storkinson, Thompson and Anderson—had only a little flour, tea, strips of bacon and a few hundred rounds of ammunition left. They were facing winter in the barrens where game—seal and polar bear—is never dependable.

"I chartered my boat to Stefánsson, supplied him with three years' provisions and killed a whale for his dogs. The party is now splendidly equipped, including the hardest and most dependable white men and natives in the north, as well as seasoned dog teams.

"Stefánsson—mark my words—will accomplish great things. He is in a class entirely by himself as an explorer. He has just the necessary mind and spirit for such work. He is always cheerful; contented with little; can eat anything on earth and relish it; can out-stare any Eskimo and hasn't a yellow streak in his make-up.

"He could pack to the North Pole and give a pleasant ten party there, if he cared to, and bring back incontrovertible proof that he had been there. That's 'Stef'.

Blonde Eskimos Aid Him.

"The Kormalik tribe—the so-called 'Blonde Eskimo'—has discovered Stefánsson's whereabouts and is moving up to his camp base on northern Banks' Land in a body. This winter there will be at least 600 of these natives, who fairly idolize Stefánsson, at his outpost, to aid him in every way with his explorations. No worry need he entertain now as to his safety."

LIEUT. COL. BROMWELL ENDS LIFE IN HAWAII

Army Engineer Often in Ft.
Wayne on Canal Project
Dies a Suicide.

Honolulu, Dec. 11.—Lieut.-Col. Charles S. Bromwell, head of the army engineer corps here, shot and fatally wounded himself yesterday. He died two hours after the shooting. Mrs. Bromwell and her daughter are in the United States, where the latter is attending school. The colonel was alone in his residence when the shooting occurred. Colonel Bromwell left his office at noon and is said to have been in apparent good spirits. It is believed by his friends here that he was driven to his death as the result of a nervous breakdown, caused by overwork. The shooting occurred in a bedroom at his residence. He was removed to the department hospital, but all efforts to save his life proved futile.

Lieut.-Col. Bromwell, while stationed at Cleveland, was a frequent visitor to Fort Wayne in connection with the movement for the Toledo, Fort Wayne and Chicago barge canal, and many Fort Wayne men interested in that project formed his acquaintance.

FOOD SOURING IN STOMACH CAUSES INDIGESTION, GAS

"Pape's Diapiesin" ends all stomach distress in five minutes.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt, if you are gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gasses and acids; eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapiesin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapiesin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapiesin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.—Advertisement.

ENGLAND TO PUSH SLACKERS INTO WAR

London Clerks Must Give Way to Women and Take Up Army Life.

London, Eng., Dec. 11.—There will be no conscription in England. But every man medically fit for national service will be forced to volunteer.

After Dec. 11, the "chucker" who fails to go into the army will be pushed. Every young man unmarried, medically fit, and not indispensable to any business of national importance, MUST FIGHT. Single men go first. The last bachelor slacker will be compelled to take the color.

By Mary Boyle O'Reilly.

the colors. That is the cabinet's iron pledge to the married.

For a year all England has whispered of the dark hint, "Compulsion is Coming." Now it is here.

I have tried to classify the English youths content to remain outside the fighting forces. The sons of old families rushed to war impelled by proud tradition. Hundreds of thousands of laborers waited only to demand government protection for wife and children before marching off to "do their bit." Ambitious middle class men hesitated for perfectly justifiable reasons. But the Absolute Slacker reasoned that he and his have no stake in the country. He is invariably a small-salaried, city bred fellow, whose chief concern in life is confessedly "to sidestep any extra effort." Parents, wife, employer look in vain for any unselfish service from specimens of this familiar type.

December eleventh calls the roll of the Absolute Slacker. Months ago many thousands of the ilk rushed into the munitions factories eager to work for any wage, for no wage, in exchange for the blue badge which waived off recruiting officers.

Gallants, a grade less self-centered, jumped into matrimony to escape the challenge, "Single Men First." Too late they learn that no marriage contracted since Registration day, Aug. 10, will relegate a man to home work. Still other eligibles planned to fly the country. The daily applications for passports rose from 25 to 500.

For curiosity I looked over one such contingent. They were well-dressed, sleek, shouldered, good-looking, soft. And they were entirely unashamed of running away. Argument, cajolery, persuasion could not pierce their determination to "take life easy."

"Now a Draconian decree has insured them a degree of saving discipline. For today every Englishman is a prisoner on parole. Another will than his shall decide whether he shall fight, or work, for his country."

Great Britain is spending gigantic sums and must carefully husband all the resources. The makers of munitions and the industrial workers in essential trades and businesses, serve in the GREATER WAR WHICH IS BEHIND WAR.

For Great Britain must furnish her dominions and allies with $5,000,000 cash daily.

The French and Italian navies rely on English coal.

The armies of France and Russia are clothed in English cloth.

The munitions of Belgium and Serbia come from English factories.

Were English industry deprived of too many workers, English credit would be seriously shaken. Hence, in the midst of a world-wide war England must cope with an economic revolution.

All fit men, including the majority now engaged in munition making, must go into the army.

All married and elderly men who can be taken from business must enter the munition factories.

All work that can be done by women must be given to women.

The great servant class must be turned from domestic to industrial service.

In London alone 150,000 men clerks must give place to female substitutes.

Dec. 11, 1915, is the birthday of UNIVERSAL OBEDIENCE in England!

Englishmen and women will haggle no longer about the rights of the individual. For the individual has no rights when they interfere with the welfare of the nation.

Englishmen, Frenchmen, Belgians, Italians, Serbians, Japanese, Germans, all the great nations EXCEPT ONE are being trained in that stern school.

How will THEIR KNOWLEDGE affect OUR IGNORANCE after the war?

NOTICE.

SKIN DISEASES
LITTLE CHILD HAD ECZEMA ALL HER LIFE—CURED IN TWO WEEKS

My little girl had eczema on her face from the time she was born till she was about three years old. It was so sore and irritating that we had to watch her day and night to keep her from scratching her face and making it bleed. It seemed to annoy her almost constantly and we tried many remedies without any benefit till we consulted Dr. Wells who cured her in two weeks. Over a year has elapsed and there has been no evidence of its return. I am pleased to recommend his treatment to others.

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.
Chicago, Dec. 11.—Wheat developed material strength today after a weak start. The demand came chiefly from commission houses and seemed to be largely in the nature of a reaction from the effects of peace talk. After opening 1/2c off to 1/4c up, with December at $1.12 to $1.13 1/2 and May at $1.13 1/2 to $1.15, prices rose all around to well above yesterday's finish.

The close was firm, 1/2c to 1 1/4c net higher, with December at $1.13 1/2 and May at $1.15@1.15 1/2.
Predictions of unsettled weather had a bullish influence on corn. Opening prices, which ranged from 1/4c to 1/2c lower to a shade advance, were followed by a moderate general uptrend.

The close was firm at 1/2c to 1/4c net advance.
Oats went higher with other cereals. There was no pressure to sell.
Provisions made gains notwithstanding a decline in the hog market. A little buying on the part of investors seemed to be responsible. Packers apparently were taking no hand on either side.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, Dec. 11.—A fairly active demand for railway shares infused general strength to today's market after an irregular opening. New York Central was the feature, advancing 2 1/2 to 10 1/4, its best price since 1915, on rumors of an early increase in the dividend. There was also inquiry for such specialties as General Motors, common and preferred, Studer, Texas company, Mercantile Marine preferred, all at substantial gains. United States Steel was heavy at first but moved forward with the balance of the list later. The closing was strong. Bonds were irregular.

Further heaviness was evinced by today's market in the initial dealings. U. S. Steel declined 3/4 to 85 1/2 on offerings of large blocks. War shares like Baldwin Locomotive, Crucible Steel, Pressed Steel Car and Studebaker were lower by substantial fractions. Among the railways Union Pacific, Erie and Canadian Pacific were under pressure, the latter soon declining on 3/4 to 17 1/2. Almost the only exceptions to the lowering tendency were Mercantile Marine preferred and International Nickel. Anglo-French bonds were stronger on futures sales.

Here's a group of old Fort Wayne photographs, made probably fifty years ago, by William Duckleburg, a pioneer photographer. The center is the old court house, made from the northwest corner, and showing a portion of the building that now is occupied by Al Riegels' cigar store. Note the distance over the right lawn, where one can see for several blocks through open fields.

David Compere, one of the early prominent residents of the city, is seen in the upper left hand corner. He was born here in 1831, the son of Francis Compere, and was active in the affairs of the city. He was married to Sarah Columbia, a member of another prominent early family, and after which, by the way, Columbia street was named. Charles Case, in the upper right hand corner, was an early attorney, whom the historians tell us, "was noted for his kind deeds and lovable actions." He certainly was a mixer and a real for sure politician, for he once defeated J. L. Worden, and once R. J. Dawson for congress, winning both his big majorities. Francis Avoline was a member of a prominent French family here in the early days. He is seen in the lower right hand corner. It was he who built the old Penn house, north of the city, on the Leo road, ninety years ago, and operated it as the county's first wayside inn, and he later built and managed the old Avoline house, that stood on the site of the present Shoff building. In the lower left hand corner is seen the father of Councilman Eugene B. Smith, J. M. Smith, an early politician in this city and for years a prominent figure in the community. The pictures were dug up at Grand Rapids recently, and were brought here by a former Fort Wayne man. They are small in the originals, and are greatly enlarged as they appear in the paper.

Why not let us talk it over with you?—surely a saving on your part; lowest possible prices on Xmas goods at Voirol's.

JAP GIRL WINS BIG FORTUNE AS REWARD

Miss Joe Susuki Befriends White Employer and Profits By It.

Seattle, Wash., Dec. 10.—In a land where race frontiers meet and white men and brown look at each other askance, the friendship of William Holt, hotel proprietor, for Miss Joe Susuki, his Jap-ill health and cheered him in temporary reverses.

Holt, unmarried, was 63 years old when he died. Miss Joe Susuki came to Seattle from Japan 16 years ago, drifting into the hotel owned by William Holt as a chambermaid with other women of her race. She soon displayed executive ability and a rare capacity to look after essential details. Holt made her manager of his hotel.

She soon became Holt's confidante, adviser and friend. She learned to speak English fluently. The $150,000 estate, including some of the finest fruit land in the state and a half interest in the hotel, was Holt's testimonial to the loyalty and efficiency of the little brown woman.

To the Occidental eye, Miss Susuki seems not to be affected in the least by the big change which has come into her life.

"I think I shall spend most of my time on the fruit ranch which he left me, in Yakima county," she said, in almost perfect English.

Next year, perhaps, she would journey to her home "in the old country" and see her parents, who live in Central Japan. Perhaps she would bring some of her relatives back with her.

"I will need some one to work the ranch," she explained. "I cannot look after it alone."

"You ask me so soon," she said, her pearl-white teeth flashing in a smile. "I have made no plans yet—no definite plans."

"Mr. Holt was always a nice man," she said slowly. "He was kind and gentle and good. He was always trying to do good. You met him once and then you liked him always after that. Everybody did. He had many friends."

An Old, Family Cough Remedy, Home-Made

Easily Prepared—Costs Very Little, but is Prompt, Sure and Effective

By making this pint of old-time cough syrup at home you not only save about 50 cents compared with the ready-made kind, but you will also have a much more prompt and positive remedy in every way. It overcomes the usual coughs, throat and chest colds in 24 hours—relieves even whooping cough—coughs and is excellent, too, for bronchitis, bronchial asthma, hoarseness and spasmodic croup.

Get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and tastes good.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. It quickly loosens the dry, hoarse or painful cough and heals the inflamed membranes. It also has a remarkable effect in overcoming the persistent loose cough by stopping the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes.

The effect of Pinex on the membranes is known by almost every one. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract combined with guaiacal and other natural healing pine elements.

There are many worthless imitations of this famous mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Lower right, "But this is dangerous," they said as they dodged automobiles.

Lower strip, Fun-up of Hamilton school kiddies on Reservoir lake.

The snow of the past ten days, accompanied by the first crisp weather of the winter, has brought winter sports into vogue in Fort Wayne. And in this winter sports do not include peddling or pugilism. For winter sports are here, even where the morning snow does not survive to greet the eve.

The camera man went gunning for participants. He found them big bunches of them scattered all over town. In the west end five youngsters were hilariously coasting down an ash heap in the back yard. True, it wasn't a long coast and it terminated on a bare alley pavement, but it was an opportunity to slide, and slide they did.

And a little distance away two boys and a girl on a trio of sleds were enjoying a sport in which the danger lent a tang. Adventure may be lured to her habitat along a hundred complex passageways. The bright face of danger smiles on men and children with an equal luminance. So these three West Perry street kiddies heard the call and responded, and were found by the snap-shutter coasting down into the street from a little elevation by the sidewalk.

"Don't you ever coast down the river bank?" inquired the always inquisitive whistler.

"No," I should say not," answered the feminine side of the triangle, (for they learn the art of conversation at an age wherein mere manikin stutters easily absorbed). "They won't let us, it's too dangerous. Course it's kind o' dangerous here, always dodging the automobiles."

There you are, it's kind o' dangerous—there is the tang that makes the fruit the sweeter. But there were youngsters coasting too, in places where danger never showed its pleasant face. On the hillsides in Swinney park, in sloping back yards, as down the stub ends of little used streets. For coasting is coming back to its own as a sport for the cold months of the year.

But coasting wasn't the only thing the gunner pulled the trigger on. For there were skaters galore on the three pools some humorist of a decade ago called lakes and has taught us to call by the same name.

At reservoir park, with the ice as thin

as a patent medicine "ad," before taking hundreds of boys and girls skate every noon before school, and the evening finds mere grown-ups testing the strength of the inch-thick covering. The kiddies from the Hamilton school congregate at the lake each noon about 12:45, and they stay until some watchful waiter announces that it's nearly time for the dread last bell.

At Lakeside park the ice is covered with people nearly all day and the evening finds it crowded, while at Swinney park the lake is only partly frozen, yet there are some who venture on its surface.

In Old Fort Wayne.

But the winter sports have degenerated in Fort Wayne. There was a time when the oldest of us were young, when there was ice enough here to lure the most timid and unenthusiastic to its surface.

Fort Wayne had the Wabash and Erie canal. It was a long narrow body of water to swim in in summer and skate on in winter, and incidentally had some boats and packets upon its placid bosom.

In the old days, when printers could set from manuscript and the fire department was on Court street, William P. Cooper was engaged in the gentle art of supplying information for the reading public. Mr. Cooper had a pair of eyes, comedy acts that appeared each year in his valuable publication. On the coldest day he wrote:

"The boys were swimming in the canal today."

However, when the sun melted the pitch from the cedar blocks on Calhoun street and the cheese and gunpowder intermingled there fragrances at Calhoun and Wayne streets. Mr. Cooper wrote that "the boys are skating on the canal."

There was one place that was considered better suited than any other for winter sports, and that was a broadening in the canal bed along what is now the Nickel Plate freight house and the Randall hotel. This was called "the basin," and it was here that old Fort Wayne skated to its heart's content.

Coasting in the old days was good along Harmar street in the vicinity of the Compartment residence, and down the canal banks east of the city. But in more recent years the old Bond home—now Benchwood place, afforded coasting for boys and girls, as did the old Monroe street hill. Here you could start at the top of an incline, coast down the bank, across the canal (for a pool remained there until a few years ago), over the Nickel Plate tracks, and then again down the bank and out over the Maumee river. It required a fatal accident to stop the practice.

And the bed of Shawnee creek used to afford a rink of no mean proportions. There was the little winding stream, running through town, and always at somebody's back door.

Then was the happy days!

But wait a minute. Advice from New York, Kansas City and Muskegon, Michigan, indicate a return of the skating craze. It seems the winter sports will come into their own after a lapse of a number of years, and if that is the case, it's time for Fort Wayne to get ready.

And in our program of preparedness, let us start with the preparing of the ice on the reservoir, Swinney park and Lakeside. An occasional scraping wouldn't hurt it a bit.

ASKS CLERK'S RESIGNATION.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 11.—Dr. John N. Hurty, state health commissioner, Monday said he had asked for the resignation of a postoffice clerk in a small Indiana city because complaint had reached the state board of health that the clerk is affected with tuberculosis, and mail passing through his hands might transmit disease. Dr. Hurty said this was the third similar case that had reached the attention of the state board, and that in two former instances the clerks in question had resigned. Local officers are asked by the state board to inform such persons that outdoor life is the only possible method of cure, and efforts are put forth to find satisfactory employment for such persons. Dr. Hurty said.

NORTHERN MAY QUIT.
Duluth, Minn., Dec. 11.—Whether the Northern league would enter the field again next year was to be decided at a meeting of baseball presidents which began here today. President Harry A. Blume, of the Duluth club, said that in view of conditions in Canada as a result of the war he would oppose any attempt to arrange a 1916 schedule. It was said that delegates opposed to President John Burnmeister would attempt to elect to the presidency Charles Moll, former president of the Wisconsin-Illinois league, and now head of the St. Boniface, Manitoba, club.

FATHER USES BOXING GLOVES TO KEEP SON AT HOME; BOY MAY BE

Bryan
Downey

Bryan Downey, a lightweight, who is slowly edging his way to the top, is one of those who did not have to run away from home to become a fighter.

He is not one of the many who, when their parents learned they wanted to be fighters, were given the choice of giving up their ambition or leaving the family residence.

In the first place Downey did not actually choose fighting as his profession. It was sort of urged upon him by his father. In the second place, it was his father who taught him to box and it was in his father's stable that he got his first hard knocks.

Downey was raised in Columbus, O. His father bought boxing gloves and provided room in the stable where the boy, several brothers and kids from the neighborhood could box. The elder Downey did not look down upon boxing as a rough neck sport, but as a means of keeping his boy at home.

"I'd rather have my boy boxing at home than loafing around street corners," said the elder Downey.

Downey is only 18 but has a good record. He has been in 22 bouts and scored 11 knockouts. He has never been beaten. The boy scored knockouts in his first four bouts. At another period of his career he scored three consecutive knockouts. He has boxed no decision affairs with Ritchie Mitchell, Young Goldie, Fatsy Kille, Cal Delaney and Fatsy McMahon.

He handed the sleep wallop to Johnny Papke, a brother of Billy, in five rounds; Frankie Dailley in six; Willie Jones in 12; Willie Jennings and Matty Caffey in one round each.

WHAT'S THE MATTER
WITH THE MUSKIES?

Do Our Good Little Neighbors Want to Be Coaxed?

Muskegon, Mich., Dec. 11.—If the Central league magnates mean business when they say that Muskegon can have half of that class next season if 500 season tickets are sold, in the opinion of baseball fans in this city a franchise in the association might just as well be forwarded to the Sawdust city at once. If the Central officials begin to tack on other qualifications to be looked upon as necessary for the coming of class B-ball to Muskegon, it is very likely that these magnates will be forced to look elsewhere. For, with the greatest industrial boom in its history now being experienced by Muskegon, this city is in reality too busy to bother to any great extent with baseball. That is, at least to the extent of guaranteeing receipts and furnishing a park, and other countless details which some leagues always demand in order that they may be able to make the American pastime staging not a business venture, but a sure thing of the I-win-you-lose variety.

If the Central circuit wants to use the old Recreation park grounds, the same baseball park as was used when Michigan State league ball was staged here, there is no question but that it may have these grounds gratis. If it is satisfied with the sale of 500 season tickets, there is little or no question that that encouragement can be secured. But further than that the erecting of stands on a new downtown park, the building of bleachers, to mean the expenditure of several thousand dollars for a private money making proposition here seems very unlikely.

Muskegon furnished 300 of more season tickets at $15 a pasteboard two years ago, and a $1,100 bonus as well, for class D pastime, only to see its men go salary-less for the last two weeks of the season.

But never again.

Muskegon baseball fans see an almost sure chance of selling 500 season tickets if a proper campaign can be waged here and if the chamber of commerce is willing to get behind and boost. Beyond that they are not in reality overly enthusiastic. This, think they, ought to be enough to give Muskegon Central league ball, since it is far and away over the total receipts registered for years in some of the former Central league towns. It is pointed out that $7,500 in cash in the club coffers at the very opening of the season ought to be a big bonus for the project.

CHAMPION SHOWS HOW SKATING BEGINNER SHOULD USE ARMS AND BODY AS AID IN GLIDING; AL SO IMPROPER USE.

(By Ben Oelck, United States Amateur Skating Champion).

Beginners should make good use of their arms in skating. Some having seen experts skate with their arms behind them, are inclined to try that style. Speed skaters use that style only to rest. Speed skaters use their arms almost as much as their feet and beginners should go almost to the same extent. The arms should be used to make the body sway because the swaying of the body makes each stroke easier.

Each time you make a stroke let the arms and body go with the skating leg. The leg should be slightly bent at the knee, then straightened at the finish of the stroke. Do a dip on each stroke. Continual dipping and swinging of the body makes it possible to glide smoothly and gracefully and without enforced effort.

Skating should be a sort of rock back and forth with a dip in each rock, the knees being used as hinges for the dip.

IN THE THEATERS

AT KEITH PALACE

A WORLD'S FAIR ACT

Hawaiian Dancers from Coast Exposition at New Palace.

One of the most talked of attractions at the Panama-Pacific exposition were the Hawaiian dancers, the Hula-Hula girls, whose native dances, songs, and whose playing on their national string instruments, advertised the fair in places where Art Smith was never heard of, will be one of the group of star attractions on the new bill at the New Palace. Toots Paka is touring the country with these girls and Hawaiian boys and the act has been hailed with delight in all the cities it has appeared in since leaving the exposition.

Little Nap, the chimpanzee with human intelligence, is performing a multitude of surprising tricks, while Harry Von Fossom will knock the spots out of Old Man Grump with his fun weapons. Mae Curtis, a girl with a personality, will relate several of her experiences, real and fancied, the real ones quite as amusing and interesting as the fancied ones.

May Aubrey and Estella Rich's novel and exclusive songs and dances include a brilliant Venetian study in black and white. In this number the scenes and the costumes are copied faithfully from those seen in Venice during late days.

This bill will succeed the current one which closes this evening. On this program are Harry Ralph's fifty girl act, The Haberdashery; Hildegarde Mason and George Murray in their comedy skit, "Getting His Goat"; Dr. Royal Raceford, the electrical wizard; the Buch Brothers in a royal bounding act; and the Big City Four, a quartet of male voices in some of the sweetest harmony you ever heard.

On Monday afternoon each woman attending the matinee will be presented with a handsome silver spoon, and one each succeeding Monday for twelve weeks, additional spoons of the same pattern will be given away, so that any woman may secure an entire set of these handsome table necessities.

AT THE TEMPLE.

CALL OF THE WOODS

It Will Succeed "Tess of the Storm Country," at Temple.

The thoroughly enthralling story, "The Call of the Woods," a story of the northwest as red blooded as Jack London's "Call of the Wild," will succeed the turbulent "Tess of the Storm Country," which closes this evening, after a week of unusual success. The Temple Players have come into a wave of popularity that shows no signs of receding, but that instead of swelling in volume and quite properly so, for the various members of the troupe are becoming "home folks" to their Fort Wayne friends, entering as they are, on their twenty-third week here. Just how much Fort Wayne has taken these artists to her bosom may best be evidenced that the Tuesday afternoon tango receptions find the stage crowded to overflowing with well-wishers, either renewing previous acquaintance or availing themselves of the opportunity of meeting the players for the first time. One of these receptions will be given again Tuesday of next week.

The management is arranging a couple of interesting contests for the Temple Players fans. One will be a popularity contest for boys and girls. Ballots will be distributed at every performance and these may be filled out and deposited in boxes provided for the purpose. The girl receiving the largest vote will be given a huge French doll, one that can say Mamma and Papa and close its eyes and other tricks, while to the successful boy will be presented a splendid coaster sled, one of the kind that can be steered and everything. This contest will be conducted Christmas week. Another will be one by which coupons clipped from the daily papers, accompanied by thirty cents, will entitle both a man and a woman to thirty-cent seats.

Helen Long Wins First. "Little Miss Helen Long, who sang 'Tennessee' as one of the numbers in the second amateur contest at the Temple last night, picked off first prize with the entire house voting for her. This sprightly miss put her song over like a professional. Second prize went to Arthur Mohr, who did some clever imitations of birds and animals. Miss Amelia Bashara ranked third in the affections of the house, her singing registering big. Other numbers on the amateur program were the Misses Cox and Wallace in a singing skit; Little Miss Esterline, a song; L. B. Ward, a song; and Sid Brown, character song and topical poem, and an act entitled "The Outlaws" and done in true western fashion by five local youths. Each was, of course, awarded a prize.

AT THE EMPRESS

Filled to the brim with the romance and glamour of the golden west, "The Road Agent" comes to the Empress theater next week for a week's run. This is the splendid drama in which Dustin Farnum achieved his first fame. It was the biggest success which the famous actor and screen star has ever had and during its run at the Empress Farnum's part will be played by the popular Melvin Gates.

Friends of the Empress stock are awaiting the initial presentation of this play with intense expectation, as it is expected to be the best of the many successes registered by this splendid organization. All the Empress stars will be seen in the drama. Miss Helen Gleason will have a part in which she will make many new friends while Walter Poulter, Harry Manners, Miss Lovelace and the others will also have parts particularly fitted to their abilities.

Scenically "The Road Agent" will be a delight. The Empress scenic artist, John Jacobs, has done himself proud in the preparation of the scenery and sets for this production.

Tonight the final performance of "Seven Days" will be given at the

AT THE ORPHEUM.

Well Illustrated in Powerful Film Drama at Orpheum.

The adage and truth that "woman is fickle" was never so well illustrated as in "The Unfaithful Wife," the powerful photodramatic success which is starring Robert B. Mantell and Genevieve Hammer at the Orpheum theater today. The story tells in striking manner of the amour between a young Italian artist and the wonderfully beautiful Countess Roman, who spurns the love of her elderly husband for the caresses of the fascinating painter. The intensity of their passion for each other leads them to resort to terrible measures in order to rid themselves of the count, but in this plan they are frustrated for the count returns to life in a vault in which the guilty lovers had buried him, and returning as if from the dead, wreak a terrible vengeance upon the slinking couple.

Monday brings "A Little Brother of the Rich" and the initial installment of "Graft," and Tuesday William Faversham in "One Million Dollars."

AT THE JEFFERSON.

"THE END OF THE ROAD"

Harold Lockwood and May Allison at the Jefferson.

A very entertaining and well balanced bill is offered at the Jefferson today. The last chapter of "Neal of the Navy" and a Helme and Louis comedy, with the Mutual masterpicture, "The End of the Road," comprises an excellent program. Harold Lockwood and May Allison are the co-stars in "The End of the Road," a story laid in the Carolina mountains, where glimpses of the life of the mountaineers is vividly depicted. Among the thrills is a raid on a mountain "still" and the capture of a band of counterfeiters. No more spectacular scene has ever been screened than that depicting the raid by government officers of the mountain still. In this play every inch is a thrill. All the elements of romance and excitement which fill the pages of the early history of the Carolinas color the play.

WARNS MAYOR MUNCIE MUST BE CLEANED UP

Gov. Ralston May Take a Hand as Impeachment Suit is Filed.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 11.—Governor Samuel M. Ralston last night served notice on Mayor Rollin H. Bunch, of Muncie, Ind., that unless conditions that are said to exist in that city must be corrected at once. The governor intimated to Mayor Bunch's attorney, John McPhee, that unless the Muncie authorities "clamp down the lid" immediately he will resort to every means at his command to cause an enforcement of the laws.

It became known here last night that Thomas P. Patterson, a Muncie attorney, who instituted an impeachment suit against Mayor Bunch, in the Delaware county courts, visited Governor Ralston Thursday and asked that Attorney General Stotenberg be directed to assist in the prosecution of cases growing out of law enforcement campaign.

The governor said last night that he will not decide whether he will ask the attorney general to assist in the cases until he obtains more information. Mr. Patterson is to give Governor Ralston further information some time next week.

IMPEACHMENT STARTED.

Muncie, Ind., Dec. 11.—An impeachment proceeding to remove Mayor Rollin H. Bunch from office was instituted here last yesterday in the circuit court by Thomas P. Patterson, an attorney, who recently came to Muncie. The complaint, brought under a civil statute, charges the mayor with failure to enforce the laws regarding liquor violations and gambling and of having, through agents, collected money from the operators of these places. Patterson refused to state what interests he represented, excepting to say that the Civic league, which was active last spring in securing graft indictments against the mayor and other city officials, had nothing to do with the suit.

THIEF ESCAPES WITH $50,000 RARE JEWELS

Chicago, Dec. 11.—Eroding three watchmen guarding the building, a thief gained entrance to the Art Institute of Chicago on Michigan boulevard, early today, and escaped with a collection of rare jewels valued at between $25,000 and $50,000. The collection was the gift of Laverne W. Noyes, a Chicago manufacturer, in memory of his late wife. It was made up of five pieces, all of ancient French make. It included a necklace of diamonds and opals, a brooch of diamonds, earrings, a watch, buckle and pendant of opals. Entrance was gained through a skylight on the roof of the building. The thief lowered himself with a rope, robbed the glass case containing the collection and climbed out again.

SAYS "SOUL KISS" LASTED TWO HOURS

New York Man Tells Court of Amazing Osculatory Performance.

New York, Dec. 11.—"Soul kisses" that lasted for more than two hours were described by Everett P. Ketchum before Supreme Court Justice Blanchard in testifying in the suit for separation brought against him by Mrs. Ada Brown Ketchum on the ground of cruelty.

Ketchum told how, when he was first introduced to his wife, she was described to him as "a girl who had never been kissed before in her life."

"She said," he testified, "that a kiss was such a sacred thing that she had saved it all her life for the man whom she was going to marry. I thought it a very beautiful idea."

Ketchum said he proposed exactly five days after they had been first introduced.

"Tell us about that first kiss she gave you, Mr. Ketchum?"

"Well," said the lawyer, "it was like this. We were seated on the sofa in the parlor. She put her arms around my neck and drew me to her and said: 'Everett, darling, this is what they call a soul kiss. This is because of my extraordinary love for you. I never knew before that a kiss lasted so long. I don't know how the ability to kiss came to me, but—'

"She leaned into my arms. Her lips met mine. She grabbed me. I tried to take my head away because I could not breathe, but—"

"How long did that kiss last?" asked Mr. Levy.

"Two hours," was the reply. "I could not get away."

YEAR IN SANITARIUM AS LAW SOUGHT HIM

Man Wanted for Robbery at Toledo, Arrested When Near Death.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—A victim of tuberculosis, Charles Green, of Toledo, Ohio, whose criminal record the police say is international, is under arrest here today, awaiting return to Cleveland, where he is wanted for having forfeited his bond of $24,000 last spring after his arrest on a charge of robbing jewelry firms of gems valued at $17,000.

Notwithstanding that the police of a score of cities and private detective agencies have sought him, Green told the police after his arrest here yesterday that he has spent the last year in a Chicago sanitarium. Physicians say he will not live more than a month.

In 1907 Green was arrested in London for the theft of $38,000 worth of diamonds from a jeweler. He took passage on a liner and was located by wireless and arrested at sea. The gems were found behind a loose panel in Green's state room. He served five years in prison for the theft. Green is alleged to have robbed jewelers throughout the country by substituting imitation gems for originals.

PRESIDENT ON HIS HOMEWARD JOURNEY

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 11.—President Wilson passed through Harrisburg today on his return to Washington from Columbus, Ohio, after one of the busiest days in his career.

His train was due at the capital at 1 p. m. The president, fatigued by his activities, which included shaking hands with about 7,000 persons, slept late. After breakfast he worked on correspondence brought with him from Washington. Senator Pomerene, of Ohio, accompanied him.

Unmasking the Underworld

To the people of the upper world as well as to the majority of the underworld comparatively little is known of the activities and income of the "heel worker" or "damper getter." Years ago he was called a "till tapper" and the tool was generally a daring small boy, working under the instruction of a "Fagin" who sent him into shops to crawl unnoticed behind the counters to steal from the money drawers whatever of silver or bills there.

But that was before the advent of the "music box" (cash register) took the graft out of boys' line of work into a proposition demanding considerable brains to plan and ability to execute store robberies with minimum risk and maximum profit. It has developed into a regular occupation with many hands of two, three and four members known as heel mobs.

BUSY AT THEIR TRADE.
Although some of these "mobs" stay in one city permanently, the higher class of damper getters work about a month in Chicago, a month in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, shorter periods in smaller cities, always going and coming, plying their trade every day, all day long, everywhere. They become known as heel men to the police of any one city only when one of their number "drops for a fall." The rare times I have heard of a first-class heel man going to prison were on account of failure to save sufficient "fall money" out of the earnings of a mob, money with which to hire a clever "mouthpiece" (lawyer) or bribe the cops.

Tom, Jerry, Harry and Dick form a "mob out on the heel." Tom is middle-aged, ruddy, in dress and appearance a prosperous stock broker. Jerry is younger, an athletic, vigorous young bank clerk to the casual glance. Harry is past 50, with hair almost white and would pass for that well known taxpayer, "pro bono publico." Dick, of uncertain age, can assume with equal ease the role of meter inspector or police inspector.

LAYING OUT THE DAY'S WORK.

They meet by appointment at their favorite cafe at 7 a. m., have a cocktail as they read the papers and map out the morning's work, which starts at 8 a. m. sharp. Selecting eight square blocks in the busiest section of town, each is given two blocks to cover in the following manner:
Tom goes to his allotted station, where every building contains one or more stores. He enters each one in turn to note how business is carried on—where the registers are located, their particular model, how easily accessible, how near an opening in the counter they are placed, whether a cashier is employed or if the salespeople operate the music boxes. Also where conditions seem favorable he makes a "buy" in order to see if the register contains many big bills.

Emerging from the store that he thinks a good robbery prospect, he writes down its name, address and enough data to furnish a useful report to the mob, in this way the eight blocks are canvassed by the industrious four. At noon they gather to submit for the consideration of Jerry, the master mind of the band, the result of their observations.

JERRY MAKES THE DECISION.

By careful process of elimination Jerry reduces these prospects in number to about a half-dozen stores, and upon him rests the final decision as to which places shall be robbed. That afternoon he visits some of the stores on the revised list, selects the one which seems the best venture for his men and perfects his plan of future action there. The next day Jerry devotes to the others on the list, while the other three continue in their "findings."

At the end of a week they have thoroughly covered a large district and Jerry has a number of stores picked out for robbery, the details for each one thoroughly worked out and decided upon. Jerry is the tool or actual money getter; the others are his stalls, and although he is open to suggestions from the stalls they must finally be governed by his instructions, because he runs the risk of losing his liberty; he alone "takes a chance."

The first store they rob is, we will say, a busy hardware retail establishment having several different departments, each department having its own special clerk and cash register. This particular place has a rush hour in which it is hard to be waited on. The music box where the steel drills, etc., are sold is the objective of our friends. During the rush hour Tom goes there and has the salesman wrap up for a $2 twist drill, and then takes the clerk back to the manager's office to get figures on the installation of a steam heating plant in his castle in Spain, a twenty-room house.

By this time Harry (pro bono publico) is at the next counter to the rear making a stall purchase. Dick, standing in the aisle, signals, by taking his hat off, to Jerry on the sidewalk just as Tom goes away from the drill counter with the salesman. Jerry, bareheaded, in his shirt sleeves, walks in rapidly with a bus-like air and goes directly to the cash register behind the counter. The moment he reaches the music box Harry drops $10 in silver quarters on the floor, attracting general attention to himself as he nervously starts to gather up the scattered coins, while Jerry calmly empties the register and walks out of the store.

CALMLY CONTINUE ROBBERING.

In a few minutes the four are together again, with Jerry giving dual instructions to his stalls regarding the next place he has chosen to rob. Back in the hardware store the loss may not be discovered for half an hour or more, and often the salesman is not only suspected of the theft but is lucky if he escapes imprisonment for the heel job he knows nothing about.

I myself with two stalls have taken three such music boxes inside of an hour.

But this graft is not by any means confined to music boxes. As a rule the biggest money on the heel is stolen from saloons. Nearly every cafe has besides the register a damper or money drawer located in the back bar, wherein are kept varying sums under lock and key during business hours and in the safe at night. Out of his damper the proprietor may pay his landlord the rent, the brewery collector for the beer, and here, too, is kept the cash for the accommodation of well-known customers who desire to have checks cashed.

In one of our large cities is a saloon run by a big German who does considerable business. Jake, the boss, pays all his bills in currency out of a cigar box he keeps in a damper while he is behind the bar, and when he goes upstairs he takes it with him.

Several heel mobs had exhausted their ingenuity in vain attempts to get Jake to leave this damper unprotected for a few minutes during the hour when his two bartenders were upstairs eating dinner and he alone in the bar. But whether it was because Jake could not be stalled on account of a suspicious nature or just his stolid laziness they failed to accomplish their purpose.

OUT FOR BIG GAME.

Finally two heel men formed a plan and waited until the first of the month, when they were reasonably sure, if successful, to get a month's rent, beer bill and the check money. On the afternoon of the first day of the month Jake was leaning his enormous frame against the back bar, talking to two German friends who stood drinking beer before him. A well-dressed stranger came in, ordered a beer, accidentally spilled some of it on his hands, asked Jake where he could wash them, and was directed to the washroom in the rear.

Shortly after the stranger went to wash his hands Jake's attention was drawn to the front window by the sight of a man in overalls ascending a ladder with a saw in his hand.

"Hey, Shultz go out and see vot dot fella is doin' mit my house," said Jake.

Shultz went out and came back to the door, calling excitedly, "Come here once, Jake. Dot's a fella wat's got a order from the mayor to take away from over your place the beer sign."

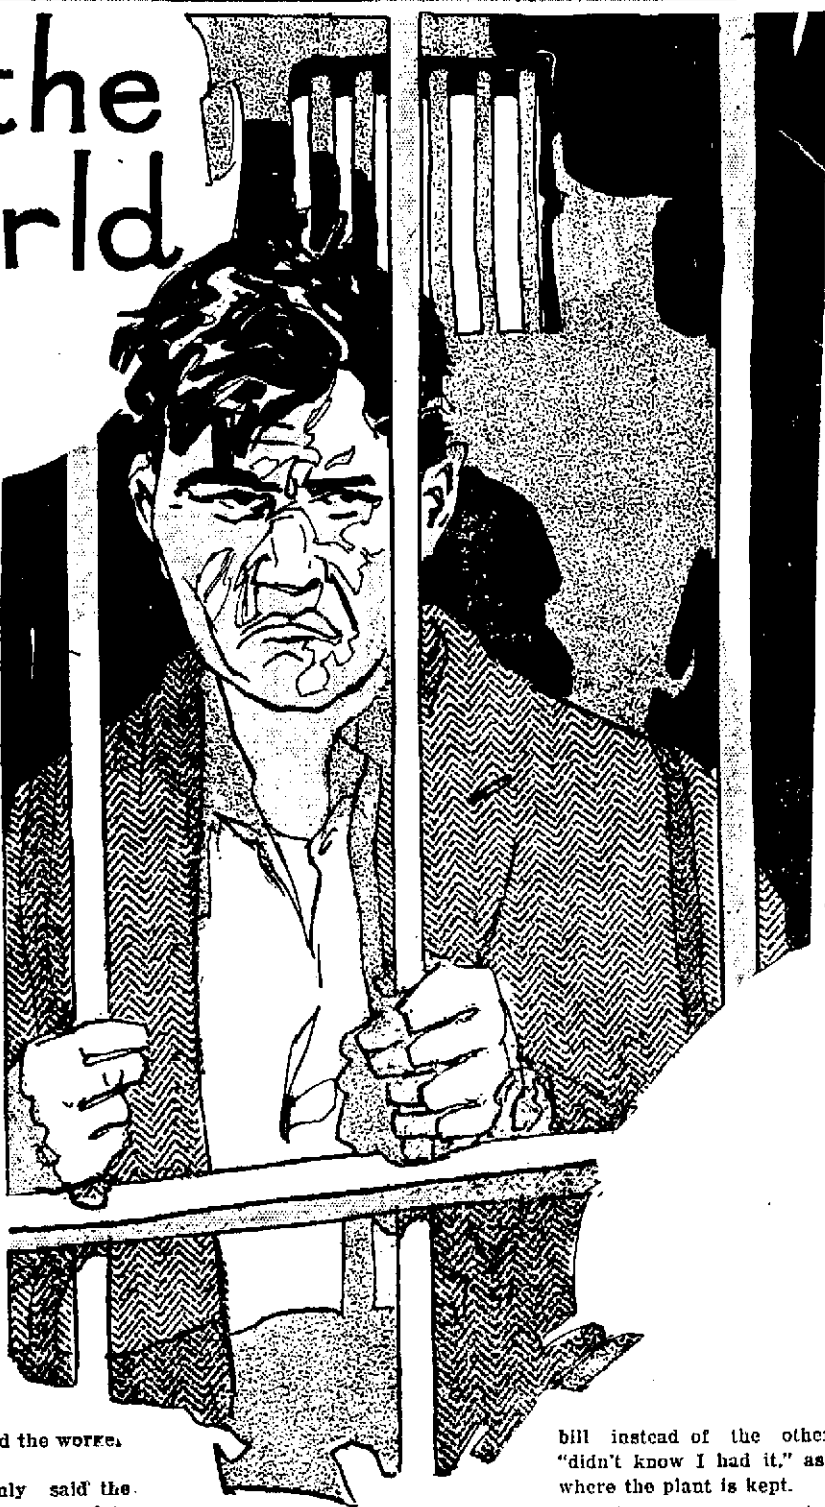

With a loud bellow of protest Jake and his friends hurried to the foot of the ladder upon which the workman was coolly starting to saw through an ornamental gilt goot.

"Hey you, what the heidmndmition you doin' by me here vat you do?"

they go to the poorer parts, where the shopkeeper lives in the rear of the shop. There are different conditions and a different objective. The meager day's receipts in a damper or register have no attraction for Jerry and his men.

They now go "ter the 'plant' of

"Who are you?" asked the worrier. "I'm der boss." "Not my boss," calmly said the man on the ladder as he turned to the sign again.

This so exasperated the German that he commenced shaking the ladder violently and the man came down, threw the saw on the ground and went away, vowing to have Jake arrested for interfering with the mayor's orders as soon as he could find a cop.

$1,000 FOR A SAW.

Jake carried the ladder and saw into the store to await the arrival of the policeman. But long before any officer came Jake discovered that some one had pried open the damper with a "James" (jimmy) and stolen over $1,000. The saw now hangs over the bar as a souvenir of one of Jake's most unlucky days.

After Jerry's mob has cleaned up the main business section of town

the owner. This plant may vary from $50 to $500, seldom less than the former and sometimes greater than the latter. The mob meets much earlier now about 6 a. m., in the neighborhood chosen, and each man again has an area to cover and a report to make.

LOCATING HIDDEN MONEY.

Tom visits several groceries, asking for change for $10 before he sees a likely opening. Here he buys of a woman alone in the store a quarter's worth and gives a $5 bill in payment. The woman goes back into the living-room and as Tom hears a drawer being pulled out he steps to the doorway and politely offers a $1 bill instead of the other, saying "didn't know I had it," as he sees where the plant is kept.

In this manner one pretext or another serves to locate the plant and note is taken of essential details. The reports are reviewed, passed upon and where necessary further perfected by other visits to the prospect. Once the plant, representing hoarded savings or funds with which to pay bills, is found there remains the reckoning as to which of the many ways of luring the unsuspecting victim out of sight and hearing while Jerry sneaks in and takes it. Dick, for instance, may impersonate a health, gas or water inspector during the slackest hour of the day and bring the shopkeeper to either back yard, cellar or even roof of the building and be well away before the theft is found out.

These are the methods of heel workers. The man who follows this line of graft is perhaps as well off as any other underworld grafter, but if superficial reading of his activities seems to argue that his is a well-paid, well-chosen trade it is greatly misleading.

Jerry, for instance, never knows how long Tom, Dick or Harry is go-

How Much Is In Your Neighbor's Pay Envelope?

Do you earn more than $1,000 a year?

If so, you are better off than fifty-nine out of every sixty persons in the United States.

Statistics compiled show that the average yearly income of persons employed in the principal industrial states of the Union range from $501 to $510.

Dr. Frank H. Streightoff, an authority on economics, places the minimum family income adequate to the maintenance of normal living conditions in the smaller cities of the north, according to the general prevailing American notion of decent living, at $650. Accordingly, unless more than one member of each family contributes to the household expenses the income is $150 a year less than adequate.

Estimates compiled show that not more than one person in every twenty-five engaged in gainful occupations in the United States earns over $1,000 a year. The latest census returns show that only 40 per cent of the population is so employed. From this the deduction is made that not more than one person in every sixty men, women and children in the United States earns $1,000 a year or more.

While the federal government has never made a survey of the earnings of the entire population, statistics have been compiled on certain industries. The last table made on the earnings of railroad employees shows that only seven men in every 100 earned as much as $1,000 a year. Earnings of male employees under 21 years of age were not considered. Neither were the earnings of female employees. If there are but seven adult male employees in every 100 making over $1,000 a year statistics here are confident that not more than four employed persons in every 100 are making over $1,000 when the low salaries of female employees and minor males is figured in the average.

With one of every twenty-five persons in the country making $1,000 a year or more, there are in the United States approximately 1,500,000 with incomes of more than $1,000 a year. The last census showed 38,167,365 persons engaged in gainful occupations. The total population at that time was 119,722,266, and the number of persons 10 years of age or over was 71,580,270. Fifty-three per cent, or a little more than half, of all the ing to stay drunk when he is drinking or sober when he is not, nor does Jerry often go sober to bed. Their business is crime—crime means prison and sure decay. Saloons and criminals are so closely associated it is impossible to think long of one without the other. In the course of my life I have become well acquainted in hundreds of saloons, ranging from sailors' haunts to the rendezvous of respected citizens, and without exception I have found the most regular customers are the men who follow crime for a living.

persons in the United States over 10 years of age were engaged in gainful occupations.

They were engaged as follows:
Agriculture 12,659,203
Extraction of minerals 964,824
Manufacturing and mechanical industries 10,658,581
Transportation 2,637,631
Professional service 1,663,569
Domestic and personal service 3,772,174
Miscellaneous occupations. 1,737,053

According to the estimates made as to the number of persons in the United States making in excess of $1,000 a year and the returns made to the treasury department on the income tax statements, there are in this country 1,169,097 persons who have incomes of more than $1,000 but less than $3,000.

That there is widespread misconception as to the number of persons having even moderate incomes was proven by the returns made as a result of the passage of the income tax law. When the law was being considered by Congress estimates were made to the committee that at least 425,000 persons in the United States had incomes of more than $3,000 per annum. The returns showed but 357,598.

When the law was passed it was believed that over 100 persons in the United States had incomes of more than $1,500,000 a year. The returns showed only forty-four to be getting more than $1,000,000. Similar reductions were made in all classes.

The first report made by the treasury department showed the number of returns made on the income tax to be as follows:

Annual Income.	No. of returns
$3,000 to $40,000.....	79,426
$4,000 to $5,000.....	114,484
$5,000 to $10,000.....	101,718

$30,000 to $40,000.....	4,553
$40,000 to $50,000.....	2,427

In some industries of the United States the number of employees receiving $6 and $7 a week is twenty times as great as the number receiving $50 a week. In the cotton industry in New Jersey there were 1,007 employees at $6 and $7 a week to forty-nine at $25. A survey made in New Jersey in 1908 showed the average annual wage in 2,127 establishments in that state to be $500.14. The number of persons employed in that number of establishments was 278,964.

Professor Nearing, who has devoted considerable study to the question of incomes in the United States, is said by Dr. Streightoff to have reached the conclusion that "not more than one adult male wage-earner in every twenty employed in the industries of Massachusetts received in annual earnings for a normally prosperous year more than $1,000. On the other hand, more than one-third of all the adult males are paid wages under $500; more than one-half receive wages under $600; while nearly three-fourths receive less than $700 annually."

In dealing with statistics on railroads Professor Nearing concluded that "in 1909 61 per cent of the million and a half railroad employees in the United States received less than $625 a year; that 93 per cent received less than $1,900 a year, leaving 7 per cent who earned more than $1,000."

Dr. Spahr's estimates show that he has figured 200,000 persons in the United States make $5,000 a year or over, 1,300,000 make from $1,200 to $5,000 and 11,000,000 get less than $1,200 a year.

Nobody Got Licked.

There are a lot of four-flushers who go through life without learning that four-flushing is a fine art. Such are beneath contempt. But one has great admiration for those few who have mastered the game.

"If a man called me a liar," asserted one of such, "I'd sail in and lick him if he weighed 300 pounds." "Well, you big bluff," answered one who was tired of listening. "I call you, right here and now. You're a liar."

"Bluff yourself," came back the artist, without a minute's hesitation. "You don't weigh more than 150 and you know what I said."

BREF EDDYTORIUL ON SNOW

There aint much room for a very long eddytoriul in this issue of the Bugle, and for this reason this eddytoriul whitch we be a goin to dash off wont be long but it'll be as strong, as we can make it consider its length and heres the subject we be a going to write about:

"SNOW IN BINGVILLE"

Sinst winter set in in this vicinity along in November it has snow & snow. In other words there has been jest one snow fall after another, and as a result the snow is now betwixt 3 & 4 ft. deep on the level in town and in some places 8 or 9 ft. deep where its drifted.

Why here is what has happend: The snow is jest simply layin where it fell, and when a person goes outen the house how can they expect to navygate with the snow 3 to 4 ft. deep?

Its a burnin disgrase & a sin & a shame how folks has permitted the snow whitch has fell to lay on their side walks so that them as has to go out and about on bizness has to flounder through same until they be exosted.

Not only that, but what has our road soopersvisers did about breakin even the Main st. of Bingville with the town snow plow made & provided for that purpose? Answer—they aint did nothink. On the other hand our road soopersvisers sets by the stove in Hen Weathersbys store and smokes and plays checkers and talks, whilst teams sticks in the snow in our street and has to be dug out with shuvvells.

We hope we wont haft to speak about this matter agin, but if we do we will say somethink in the columns of the Bugle that we calculate will wake up our road soopersvisers to a sense of their responsibility even if we haft to rake and scrape through their pasts in order to dig up some skandals in their pasts whitch they wouldnt care to see in print.

THIS AINT WHAT YOU MIGHT CALL A THREAT—ITS A PROMISE!

Country Correspondence

CORNCOB CORNERS

Enos Crabtree is talking some of painting his barn next summer. It talking would do the job Enos' barn would of been painted years ago.

Gabe Miller has killed three hogs and has been selling fresh pork in this vicinity. It went fine. Your correspondent had a mess of sausage.

Teenie Woods was spelt down at a spelling bee at No. 8 skoolhouse last Friday night by Miss Matilda Hawkins. Teenie was so put out that she called Matilda a cat after the spelling bee and cried all the way home.

There is considerable sickness in our midst, mostly bad colds. Many of the people around the Corners also has hooping cough and hoop it up pretty lively all the time.

Abner Slocumb has a horse he will sell cheap. The horse kicked at Abner last week, and if it had hit him would of killed him likely. Good reason, Ab, for selling.

ANANIAS.

WAYCROSSVILLE

Sam Wilkins is on the sick list. Jake Ammerman is laid up with an attack of the grip.

Samantha Brown is laid up with general ability and has been for some time past.

These are all the calamities in our midst whitch your correspondent can think of at this writing, but hopes to be able to chronical more of same next week.

OCKASHINAL.

Lokals

Ham Wilson's wife while sewing on her sewing machine last week nearly sewed thru her thumb. Mrs. Wilson is one of the best sewers in Bingville.

We understand that Ben Wilson has been talking about us behind our back. Unless Ben desires to get himself arrested for defamashion of karacter it would be well for him to call at this office at onct and make a humble apology.

Mrs. Hame Miller of Millersville was the guest of Mrs. Cy Hoskins for two days last wk. Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Hoskins is sisters and visit quite often back and forth.

Wes Woodruff, our expert hunter and trapper, has the pelts of 21 polecats stretched over boards and hung up on the outside of his cowbarn. These pelts aint very oderiferous this cold weather, but we shudder to think how obnoxious they will git when the spring thaws set in.

Abe Witherow got a letter tother day from his brother Sam who lives in Dakota. This is the first time Abe has heard from Sam for 23 years. Abe says Sam is well as usual.

Gid Smalley, while lifting a log down at Sandy Creek saw mill Tuesday last, got a stitch in his back and is laid up in bed. Gid says a man is a iule to bust himself nearly in two trying to lift more than anybody else.

Phoebe Hildebrand, our fashionable dressmaker, says that business in her line is very slack at the present time. Phoebe says December is always a slow month in the dressmaking business.

Personal Mentshlon

Gid Smalley, while sprinkling the icy sidewalk in front of his house to keep people from falling down, had his foot to slip and fell himself, spraining his ankle, shaking him up considerable and spilling the ashes all over him. Gid says its just his luck to fall on his own sidewalk. If he had of fell on somebody else's sidewalk he could of brought suit for damages against them.

Lafe Whittaker led his old horse Nero out to water tother morning when it was below zero and Nero was skittish and forth to cawer, hauling Lafe back and forth all over the stable yard. As soon as Lafe got Nero back into the stable again he give him a good larruping for cuttin up so.

Mrs. Cy Hoskins baked up a lot of doughnuts last Saturday. Cy he et 9 of them before they cooled off and aint felt well sinst. Mrs. Hoskins bakes turrible good doughnuts.

Amzi Witherow had a bad cold in his chest and so he stuck a porous plaster on his chest to cure it with. The cold is now well, but the porous plaster remains. Amzi says he has tried to pull it off several times but it hurts him so had he aint got the moral courage to do so and calculates he will let it wear off.

Sime Henderson's wife's grand-mother's sister, who lives at Sorrow Hollow, is visiting for a few days at Sime's house. She is a very spy old lady for her age. How old she is we didn't learn.

Brad Hinsley invited us into his cellar tother day and give us a dipperful of hard cider. Its fine cider—if you know when youve got enough. One dipperful is eggeralating, but we calculate that two dipperful would incapacitate a person for work.

Mrs. Jerushia Perkins put out a big wash last Monday morning and hadn't no more than got up the last things on the line until the line broke and about half of the wash had to be did over agin. Jerushia was a good deal put out about this.

A Hasty Exit

Old Dad Henderson called at the residence of Lem Brown to see Lem on business tother morning. Lem wasnt home, but Dad said he'd just step in and wait till Lem got back.

Mrs. Brown she give him a chair by the fire, and Dad set down. While Dad set there the snow and dirt melted often his boots whitch he didn't clean when he entered the house, and made a awful mess on Mrs. Brown's nice clean floor. Mrs. Brown is awful neat and tidy about her house, and when she seen that Dad had soiled her floor so turrible she opened the door, grabbed up a broom and swept him right into the street, slamming the door behind him. Next time Dad calls at Mrs. Brown's house we calculate he will clean his boots before he enters.

Items Here and There

Doc Livermore, our eminent Horse Fizishian and Human Speshialist made a quart bottle of medicine last wk. and set it aside. Now Doc has forgot what he put into the medicine and what he made it for, being as he didn't lable it, but he calculates he can find out what the medicine is good for by experimenting with it on horses and humans.

Simon Whittleby, so roomer says, has won the hart and hand of a handsome widder at the Co. Seat who he will lead to the altar. We don't credit this roomer becuz Sime is too shy and bashful to ask a woman to take him for better or for worse.

Mrs. Ab Skinner who moves in the best soshial circles in Bingville says she would like to have two or three more washings to do. Little Willie Skinner will come for same and return said washings to you after it is washed.

Miss Amelia Tucker, the acknowledged sassiest queen of Bingville, is laid up with pneuragm in her face whitch is so swelled up that it don't look like Amelia's face at all.

Jed Peters, our intelligent skoolteacher, desired us to announce that the parents of skollers who he is learning are corjially invited to visit the skool whenever they feel like it and see the almost human intelligence displayed by his varius pupils.

Awful Toothacke

Bill Hepburn, our artistick blacksmith had a awful toothacke one night last week. It was a jumping toothacke, and every time the tooth jumped he said he thort to goodness his head would fly off his shoulders.

He couldnt sleep a wink and along about 1 a. m. he got up and dressed and went to Doc Livermore who he woke up and asked Doc to pull the tooth outen his head as quick as he could get hold of it. Doc was nearly asleep and a good deal bewildered at that hour of the morning, but he got Bill into a chair and rammed a pair of forceps into his mouth, planting one foot into Bills stummick, leaned back and pulled and hauled until the tooth finally come out, when to Bills disgust he found that Doc had pulled the wrong tooth.

Doc said if at first you dont succeed try, try again, so he rammed the forceps back into Bills mouth and took hold of the tooth that was acking and strained back, and the forceps slipped offen the tooth and Doc fell sprawling, striking his head a awful wallop on the corner of the bureau.

By this time Bill said he guessed his toothacke was better and that he would return home and go to bed, whitch he done in deep disgust. Bill says that between Doc pulling the wrong tooth the first time and the forceps slipping off the right tooth the second time, his mouth acked him so bad he couldn't tell whether he had a toothacke or not.

Begin the New Year Right

Don't you want to begin the New Year with a clear conscience? Don't you want to begin the New Year with all your dets paid up to date and with a clean page before you? If so, and you owe the Bugle anywhere from $10 to $15, why don't you step into our office like a man (or a woman, as the case may be), and settle?

It will make you feel better to do this, and will make us feel better and more prosperouser. Dont put this off until you forget about it, but do it now. Show an interest in your town by helping your town newspaper, whitch is now on its last legs, and unless them as owe money to it comes to the rescue we calculate it wont last long.

Cy Hoskins Swopped Watch

Cy Hoskins and Ame Hillyer swopped watches in Hen Weathersby's store tother night. Ame thinks he got a little the best of Cy in the swop, being as the watch he got sometimes runs as long as an hour at a time, whereas the watch Ame traded to Cy wont go at all less you shake it, and then only for a minute or two. Neither watch is a very reliable timepiece as you might say.

Hot for Homer

Homer Perkins took a hot soapstone to bed with him to warm his feet on last Tuesday night, whitch was one of the coldest nights we have had so far this winter. Homer had a towel rapped around the hot soapstone, but after he went to sleep he worked the towel offen the soapstone with his feet, then he dreamt he had died and went to a hotter climate.

When Homer woke up and realized that his feet was on the hot soapstone he says he jumped strait up outen bed and lit clean in the middle of the floor with one jump. One heel is so bad terred that Homer has to wear a tice on it.

Births

We regret not being able to report any births in Bingville or vicinity in this issue of the Bugle. We had hoped to be able to report at least one new arrival in this issue, together with its weight, sex and other important particulars, but the expected dont always happen, and we therefore ask you to be pashient until next week or the week after, when we hope to be able to state definitely that one more has been added to the growing populashion of Bingville.

SKATES Sharped

Being as business is dull I thought I might as well make a extra dollar or two sharpening skates for the boys whitch is why I insert this advertisement. The ice is good at present. Make the most of it, boys, while it lasts. Remember they wont be no ice on Snake Crick or Gootchie Pond next July. Skate while you can. What is the use trying to skate on dull skates when you can have me sharp them up keen as a razor for 5 cts. per pair. I will sharp your skates while you wait. I sharpened up a pair of skates for Lem Quigley last wk and they was so sharp that they slip out from under him and ilke to o broke his fool neck. I will do the same to you. I don't know much about skating myself, being as I never had a skate on in my life, but I can sharp them for you all right. Give me a trial and be convinced.
